PREFACE.

No one can edit this Book of the Georgics without some feeling of wonder that it is not more frequently read in comparatively low forms. The first half is perfect in style, most interesting in matter, and, with the exception of a few lines, extremely simple. In the second half the story of Aristaeus, although out of proportion to the size of the Book, is yet an excellent example of Virgil's narrative power, complete in itself, almost free from difficulties, and exhibiting in the account of Orpheus and Eurydice the highest poetic merit. In addition, the whole Book is short, so that even young boys can read it in a moderate time, nor does its study need any previous acquaintance with other of Virgil's writings. It would be impossible to find a better subject for those who already know a little Latin.

It is now fashionable in elementary editions to write notes which are very brief and absolutely dogmatic, the editor ignoring all views but one and assuming infallibility, because, it is said, discussion only engenders doubt, perplexity, and scepticism in the youthful mind. This method is popular with editors because it involves little trouble, with boys for a like reason, and with schoolmasters because such notes are useful in preparing pupils to pass examinations. None the less it is intrinsically bad, for, if the object of all education is to teach a boy to use his own intelligence, then a single note which causes him to think does more good than a hundred which merely state that the solution of a difficulty is this or that. Of course, in schoolbooks discussion must be brief and clear, but to omit it altogether is to make notes not only useless but harmful, for the conceit of knowledge is more fatal than ignorance. My own annotations will probably sufficiently illustrate how hard it is to deal with difficulties at once tersely and intelligently, but at any rate I have had a higher aim than merely to smooth the way for idleness.

As regards the history of bees, I have only consulted very ordinary authorities, but my friend Mr. O. S. Latter of Charterhouse, who understands the subject, assures me that my scientific statements are fairly accurate, while in some cases he has assisted me with valuable information and suggestions.

INTRODUCTION.

P. Vergilius¹ Maro was born Oct. 15, B.C. 70, at Andes, a small village near Mantua in Cisalpine Gaul, five years before Horace and seven before C. Octavius, who later, under the names of Octavian and Augustus, was destined to become his great patron. His father was a yeoman, and cultivated a small farm of his own. The boy was educated at Cremona and Mediolanum (Milan), and is said to have subsequently studied at Neapolis (Naples) under Parthenius of Bithynia, from whom he learnt Greek, and at Rome under Siron, an Epicurean philosopher, and Epidius, a rhetorician. His works afford ample evidence of his wide reading, and he certainly merits the epithet of doctus to which all the poets of his age aspired;² a noble passage in the Georgics (2. 475-492) expresses his deep admiration for scientific and philosophic study, while throughout the Aeneid, and especially in the speeches of the fourth Book, there are marked traces of that rhetorical training which has left such a profound impress on the literature of the succeeding century.

On completing his education he seems to have returned home, and some of the minor poems ascribed to him—Ciris, Copa, Culex, Dirae, Moretum—may be in reality youthful attempts of his composed during this period. Our first certain knowledge, however, of his poetic career begins in B.C. 42, when, after the defeat of Brutus and Cassius at Philippi, the Roman world passed into the hands of the triumvirs Octavian, Antony, and Lepidus. They had promised their victorious veterans the lands of eighteen cities in Italy, among which was Cremona, and subsequently it became necessary to include the neighbouring district of Mantua. Virgil's father was threatened with the loss of his farm, but the youthful poet had secured the favour of C. Asinius Pollio, governor of Cisalpine Gaul, and of L. Alfenus Varus, his successor (B.C. 41), whose assistance he invokes in the sixth Eclogue. Pollio, himself a scholar and poet, accepted the dedication of his earliest Eclogues, and secured for him an introduction to Octavian at Rome,\(^1\) as a result of which he obtained the restoration of the farm. His gratitude to the youthful triumvir finds expression in the Eclogue which he prefixed to the others, and which now stands at their head.

From this time Virgil lived at Rome or Naples enjoying the bounty and friendship of the Emperor and forming part of the select circle of distinguished men, which his minister Maecenas—the great literary patron of the day—gathered round him in his mansion on the Esquiline. It was at the request of Maecenas\(^2\) that he composed the four Books of the Georgics, written between 37 B.C. and 30 B.C., and dedicated to him.\(^3\) We know little of his life, but it was he who introduced Horace to Maecenas,\(^4\) and in Horace’s writings we catch an occasional glimpse of him, notably in the description of the famous ‘journey to Brundisium’, when he joined the party of Maecenas at Sinuessa, and, along with Plotius and Varius, is classed by his brother-poet in a memorable phrase among ‘the fairest souls and dearest friends on earth’,\(^5\) while on another occa-

a loftier theme and producing a great national epic, from Samos, at Athens, whence he accompanied him homewards, but his health, which had been long weak, broke down, and he died at Brundisium Sept. 22, B.C. 19.

He was buried at Naples on the road which leads to Puteoli. The inscription said to have been inscribed on his tomb refers to the places of his birth, death, and burial, and to the subjects of his three great works:

Mantua me genuit, Calabri rapuere, tenet nunc Parthenope: cecini pascua, rura, duces.

Virgil was largely read in his own day, and his works, like those of Horace, at once became a standard text-book in schools,¹ and were commented on by numerous critics and grammarians, of whom Aulus Gellius in the second century and Macrobius and Servius in the fourth are the most important. The early Christians in the belief, still unquestioned in the days of Pope,² that the fourth Eclogue contained a prophecy of Christ, looked upon him almost with reverence, and it is not merely as the greatest of Italian singers, but also as something of a saint, that Dante claims him as his master and guide in the Inferno. In popular esteem he was long regarded as a wizard (possibly owing to his description of the Sibyl and the under world in the sixth Aeneid), and it was customary to consult his works as oracles by opening them at random and accepting the first lines which were chanced upon as prophetic. The emperor Alexander Severus thus consulted the Sortes Vergilianae, and opened at the words Aen. 6. 852 tu regere imperio populos, Romane, memento, while Charles I. in the Bodleian Library at Oxford came upon the famous lines Aen. 4. 615-620:

> at bello audacis populi vexatus et armis, > finibus extorris, complexu avulsus Iuli, > auxilium imploret, videatque indigna suorum funera; nec, quum se sub leges pacis iniquae tradiderit, regno aut optata luce fruatur, > sed cadat ante diem mediaque inhumatus arena.

In considering Virgil's writings, it must be borne in mind that, with the exception of satire, Roman poetry is entirely modelled on Greek. Terence copies Menander, Lucretius Empedocles, Horace Alcaeus and Sappho, Propertius Callimachus, and so on. Virgil in his Eclogues professedly imitates Theocritus, in his Georgics Hesiod, and in the Aeneid Homer. The cultured circle of readers for whom he wrote would probably have turned aside with contempt from a poem which relied wholly on native vigour, and did not conform, at any rate outwardly, to one of the accepted standards of literary excellence. They relished some happy reproduction of a Greek phrase, which was 'caviare to the general',

much in the same way that English scholars sometimes dwell with peculiar satisfaction on passages of Milton which it needs a knowledge of Latin to appreciate. Horace in his treatise on Poetry (l. 268) lays down the law which was considered universally binding on all poets:

\[ \text{vos exemplaria Graeca} \]
\[ \text{nocturna versate manu, versate diurna;} \]

and Seneca (Suas. 3) tells us that Virgil borrowed from the Greeks \textit{non surripiendi causa, sed palam imitandi, hoc animo ut vellet adgnosci.}

The Bucolics (\textit{Boukoliká} ‘songs about herdsmen’) consist of ten short poems commonly called Eclogues (\textit{i.e.} ‘Selections’) and belong to the class of poetry called ‘pastoral’. They are largely copied from Theocritus, a Greek poet who flourished during the first half of the third century B.C., and who, though born at Cos and for some time resident in Alexandria, spent the chief portion of his life in Sicily. His poems, called ‘Idylls’ (\textit{Eiôylλα}i\textit{α}) or ‘small sketches’, are descriptive for the most part of country life and often take the form of dialogue. Their origin is to be traced to that love of music and song which is developed by the ease and happiness of pastoral life in a southern clime (Lucr. 5. 1379 \textit{seq}.), and to the singing-matches and improvisations common at village feasts, especially among the Dorians who formed so large a proportion of the colonists of Sicily. The Idylls however differ from the Eclogues in a marked manner. They are true to nature; the scenery is real; the shepherds are 'beings of flesh and blood';¹ their broad Doric has the native vigour of the Scotch of Burns. The Eclogues, on the other hand, are highly artificial. They are idealized sketches of rustic life written to suit the taste of polished readers in the metropolis of the world. 'Grace and tenderness' are, as Horace notes,² their chief characteristics, and the 'Lycidas' of Milton is an enduring monument of his admiration for them, but true pastoral poetry can scarcely be written under such conditions. The shepherds and shepherdesses of the Eclogues, like those depicted on Sèvres porcelain or the canvases of Watteau, are 'graceful and tender,' but they are imaginary and unreal.

The Georgics (Γεωργικά) are, as their name implies, a 'Treatise on Husbandry' consisting of four Books (containing in all 2,184 lines), of which the First deals with husbandry proper, the Second with the rearing of stock, the Third with the cultivation of trees, and the Fourth with bee-keeping. They profess to be an imitation³ of Hesiod, a very ancient poet of Ascra in Boeotia, whose poem entitled 'Works and Days',\(^1\) consists of a quantity of short sententious precepts thrown into a poetic form. Such poetry is called 'didactic' because its aim is to convey instruction. In early ages, when writing is unknown or little used, proverbs and precepts are naturally cast into a poetic mould for the simple reason that they are thus rendered less liable to alteration and more easy of recollection.\(^2\) Even when prose writing has become common a philosopher or a preacher may endeavour to render his subject more attractive by clothing it in poetic dress,\(^3\) and shortly before Virgil began to write Lucretius had so embodied the philosophic system of Epicurus in his De Rerum Natura. That splendid poem was constantly in Virgil's mind when he wrote the Georgics, but, though he found in Lucretius a source of inspiration and in Hesiod a model, he differs widely from them both. Hesiod wrote didactic poetry because in his day it was practically useful, Lucretius wrote it in the interests of what he believed to be philosophical truth; Virgil's object is on the other hand not primarily to instruct but to please. What he writes is excellent sense, for he thoroughly understood his subject, and his love for agriculture and the 'divine country' is undoubtedly genuine, but he writes to gratify the artistic and literary tastes of his readers and not with any practical aim. The characteristic indeed of the Georgics is their consummate art. They are written with slow and elaborate care. Each line has been polished to the utmost perfection, or, to use a phrase attributed to Virgil, 'licked into shape like a bear's cub.' The Aeneid is conventionally spoken of as Virgil's greatest work, and, possibly, the dramatic power of the fourth Book and the imaginative grandeur of the sixth surpass anything in the Georgics, but as a monument of his literary skill they stand unequalled.

The Aeneid consists of twelve books, and is an epic poem professedly modelled on Homer. The first six books describe the wanderings and the second six the wars of Aeneas, so that the whole work constitutes a Roman Odyssey and Iliad in one.

Book I. relates how Aeneas, a Trojan prince, son of Venus and Anchises, while sailing with his

1 Allowing seven years for their composition, we get an average of less than a line a day.

2 Vita Donati, 'carmen se ursae more parere dicens, et lambendo demum effingere'.

3 This statement may be definitely tested in one point. Let any one take the first Georgic and examine the exquisite finish of rhythm exhibited in lines 27, 65, 80, 85, 108, 181, 199, 281-3, 293, 295, 320, 328-334, 341, 356, 378, 388, 389, 406-9, 449, 468, 482. There is nothing like it in the Aeneid.

fleets from Sicily, encounters a storm stirred up by Aeolus at the request of Juno, who, still cherishing the wrath first aroused in her by the fatal judgment of Paris, desires to destroy the last remnant of the Trojan race, and so prevent their founding in Italy a second and mightier empire. Cast ashore on the African coast Aeneas and his followers are hospitably welcomed by Dido, the Phoenician queen, who is just completing the building of Carthage. At a banquet given in their honour Dido, who through the schemes of Venus has become enamoured of Aeneas, invites him to tell her his history.

In Book II. Aeneas relates the storm and sack of Troy and his own escape, along with his father Anchises and his son Ascanius. In Book III. the narrative is continued, and Aeneas describes how, in pursuit of that 'Western Land' (Hesperia) which had been promised him by an oracle, he had wandered to Thrace, Crete, Epirus, and Sicily, where his father had died.

Book IV. resumes the main narrative from the end of Book I. Dido's passion for Aeneas becomes

1 This favourite device of beginning a story in the middle and then making some one relate the preceding events in the form of a narrative is borrowed from Homer, who in Books 9-12 of the Odyssey makes Ulysses relate the earlier history of his wanderings to Alcinous. Hence the phrase ἦστερον πρῶτερον Ὁμηρικῶς.

2 Otherwise called Iulus, the legendary ancestor of the gens Iulia.
overmastering, and he accepts her love, lingering in Carthage unmindful of his quest, until Jupiter sends Mercury to bid him depart at once. In spite of Dido's pleading he sets sail, and she stabs herself.

In Book V. Aeneas reaches Sicily on the anniversary of his father's death, and celebrates elaborate funeral games in his honour. Juno persuades the matrons to set fire to the ships, but Aeneas prays for rain, which stays the flames, and then, leaving the less adventurous among his followers behind, he sets sail for Italy.

In Book VI. Aeneas lands at Cumae, and with the help of the Sibyl discovers the 'golden bough,' which is a passport through the underworld. Through it he passes, guided by the Sibyl, and finally finds Anchises, who points out to him the souls of those who are destined to become great Romans and describes their future fortunes, after which Aeneas returns safely to the upper air.

Books VII.-XII. describe how Aeneas allied himself with Latinus, king of the Latins, and received the promise of the hand of his daughter Lavinia, and how Turnus, king of the Rutuli, a former suitor for Lavinia's hand, opposed him, but was at last defeated and slain.

The Aeneid, it will thus be seen, is a sort of national epic intended to connect the origin of the Romans (and especially of the Julian family) with the gods and heroes of Homeric song, and incidentally serving to dignify many Roman customs and ceremonies by identifying them with the customs and ceremonies of the heroic age. At the same time Aeneas and his followers, as through difficulties and dangers, putting their trust in heaven, they steadily press forward to success, afford a visible personification of those virtues which had slowly and surely secured for Rome the empire of the world, while Aeneas himself 'as a fatherly ruler over his people, their chief in battle, their law-giver in peace, and their high-priest in all spiritual relations,'¹ is clearly a type of Augustus, the founder of the new monarchy.²

As a story of war and adventure the Aeneid cannot compete in freshness and life with the Iliad and the Odyssey. It could hardly do so. Between the bard who chants the 'glory of heroes' at the feasts of warrior chiefs in a primitive age and the studious poet who expects the patronage of Augustus and the criticism of Maecenas there is a gulf which nothing can bridge. Indeed the Aeneid and the Homeric poems, though they challenge comparison by their similarity of form, are really so profoundly different in spirit and character that they ought never to be compared. It would be as easy to compare ‘Chevy Chase’ with the ‘Idylls of the King.’ The one is a natural growth, the other an artistic creation. The one describes men who live and breathe as they appeared to men of like passions in their own day; the other attempts to give animation to the ghosts of the past, and make them interesting to men whose thoughts, tastes, and tempers are wholly different. To the Homeric story-teller and his hearers the story is the chief thing and its literary form the second; to Virgil and his readers literary art is the first thing, and the actual facts of the story are comparatively unimportant.

² Nor is it unreasonable to see in Dido a type of those seductive charms coupled with unfeminine ambition which the Romans dreaded and detested in Cleopatra.

Moreover, Virgil is unhappy in his hero. Compared with Achilles his Aeneas is but the shadow of a man.\(^1\) He is an abstraction typifying the ideal Roman, in whom reverence for the gods (\(\text{pietas}\)) and manly courage (\(\text{virtus}\)) combine, and who therefore ultimately achieves what he aims at in spite of ‘manifold mischances and all the risks of fortune’.\(^2\) Indeed throughout the Aeneid he is so regulated by ‘fate’, visions, and superintending deities that it is hard to take any real interest in his acts and doings. But he is not only unreal

\(^{1}\) The difference is like that between Tennyson’s ‘Knights of the Round Table’ and ‘the Doglas and the Persie’, who

and uninteresting; he is displeasing. Sum pius Aeneas is how he introduces himself,¹ and all through he goes about with that painful adjective ostentatiously tied round his neck, doing what he ought to do and saying what he ought to say from first to last. Once only he exhibits human frailty, and then it is to show that as a human being he is contemptible. He accepts the love of Dido and then abandons her to despair and death. There is no need to emphasize his crime; Virgil himself has done that sufficiently. The splendid passage (4. 305-392) which describes the final interview between Aeneas and the queen is a masterpiece. To an appeal which would move a stone Aeneas replies with the cold and formal rhetoric of an attorney. Then Dido bursts into an invective which, for concentrated scorn, nervous force, and tragic grandeur, is almost unequalled. Finally, sweeping from the room, she sinks swooning into the arms of her attendants, while Aeneas is left stammering and ‘preparing to say many things’—a hero who had, one would think, lost his character for ever. But Virgil seems unmoved by his own genius, and begins the next paragraph quite placidly at pius Aeneas . . .! How the man who wrote the lines placed in Dido’s mouth could immediately afterwards speak of 'the good Aeneas etc.' is one of the puzzles of literature, and even the fact that the Aeneid was never finished does not explain so glaring an inconsistency. The point is inexplicable, but we ought in fairness to remember that the chilling shadow of imperial patronage rested upon Virgil. He was not only a poet but a poet-laureate. It is the poet who pens the speeches of Dido, while the poet-laureate describes the 'good Aeneas' to gratify a prince who in order to found an empire —dum conderet urbm—would certainly not have let a woman's ruin stand in the way of state policy or his own ambition.

¹ ‘Can you bear this?’ was the observation of Charles James Fox, a warm admirer of Virgil, but who describes Aeneas as ‘always either insipid or odious’.
INTRODUCTION.

Although however as an epic poem the Aeneid is wanting in vitality and human interest, the praise of eighteen centuries is sufficient evidence of its striking merits. What those merits are has been already partly indicated in referring to the Georgics. Virgil is a master of melodious rhythm, and he is a master of literary expression. The Latin hexameter, which in Ennius, the father of Latin poetry, is cumbrous and uncouth, and in Lucretius, though powerful and imposing, still lacks grace and versatility, has been moulded by Virgil into a perfect instrument capable of infinite varieties and responsive to every phase of emotion; while, as regards his literary power it is impossible to read ten lines anywhere without coming across one of those felicitous phrases the charm of which is beyond question as it is beyond analysis. But these external graces are not all. Virgil is a man of deep though controlled feeling. He is a patriot who loves his country with a love 'far brought from out the storied past', and his pride in her imperial greatness animates the whole poem and lives in many a majestic line. ¹ He has pondered long and painfully on the vicissitudes and shortness of human life, but his sadness (which some have censured as 'pessimism'), while it lends pathos to his style, never degenerates into despair, and the lesson which he draws from the certainty of death is the necessity of action. ² He is deeply religious and a firm believer in an overruling Power who rewards the good ³ and requites the evil, ⁴ but the riddle of 'all-powerful Chance and inevitable Doom' ⁵ is ever before his mind, and this blending of belief and doubt, of faith and perplexity, congenial as it is to human nature, has a singular attractiveness.

It is unnecessary, after what has been already said about the fourth Book, to point out what a strength of rhetorical force, what a reserve of passionate emotion underlies the habitual quiet and reflectiveness of Virgil's temper. That book indeed reveals an intensity of feeling and a dramatic power, of which the rest of his writings afford little sign; but there is another book of the Aeneid which rises to a still higher level and places Virgil in the foremost ranks of poetry. The sixth Book is beyond praise: to it Virgil chiefly owes his fame; it is here that he exhibits, in fullest measure, the highest poetic powers of imagination and invention; it is here that we find the Virgil who is worthy to walk side by side with Dante, and with whom John Bunyan and John Milton are to be compared. As we pass with him into the under world, by the sole force of genius he makes a dream seem to us a living fact; he commands our thoughts to follow whithersoever he leads them, and they obey; under his guidance we tread with ghostly but unhesitating footsteps that dim and unknown highway which extends beyond the grave.

For an ordinary man, however, to criticise Virgil is almost an impertinence. It needs a poet to appreciate a poet, and the judgment of Alfred Tennyson outweighs that of a host of critics and commentators. There could be no more just and happy tribute from one master to another than the following Ode addressed by the English to the Roman Virgil.*

pontibus ut crebris possint consistere et alas pandere ad aestivum solem, si forte morantes sparserit aut praceeps Neptuno inmersit Eurus.
haec circum casiae virides et olentia late serpulsa et graviter spirantis copia thymbrae floreat, inriguumque bibant violaria fontem.
ipsa autem, seu corticibus tibi suta cavatis
seu lento fuerint alvaria vimine texta, angustos habeant aditus: nam frigore mella cogit hiemps, eademque calor liquefacta remittit.
utraque vis apibus pariter metuenda; neque illae nequiquam in tectis certatim tenuia cera spiramenta linunt fucoque et floribus oras explent, collectumque haec ipsa ad munera gluten et visco et Phrygiae servant pice lentius Idæ.
saepe etiam effossis, si vera est fama, latebris
sub terra fovere Larem, penitusque repertae pumicibusque cavis exesaeque arboris antro.
tu tamen et levi rimosae cubilia limo ungue fovens circum et raras superinice frondes.
neu propius tectis taxum sine, neve rubentes
ure foco caneros, altae nee crede paludi, aut ubi odor caeni gravis aut ubi concava pulsu saxa sonant vocisque offensa resultat imago.

quod superest, ubi pulsam hiemem Sol aureus egit
sub terras caelumque aestiva luce reclusit, illae continuo saltus silvasque peragrant purpureosque metunt flores et flumina libant summa leves. hinc nescio qua dulcedine laetae progeniem nidosque fovent, hinc arte recentes excudunt ceras et mella tenacia fingunt.
hinc ubi iam emissum caveis ad sidera caeli nare per aestatem liquidam suspexeris agmen obscuuramque trahi vento mirabere nubem, contemplator: aquas dulces et frondea semper tecta petunt. huc tu iussos adsperge saporens, trita melisphylla et cerinthae ignobile gramen, tinnitusque cie et Matris quate cymbala circum:
ipsae consident medicatis sedibus, ipsae intima more suo sese in cunabula contend.

sin autem ad pugnam exierint—nam saepe duobus regibus incessit magno discordia motu, continuoque animos vulgi et trepidantia bello
corda licet longe praesciscere; namque morantes Martius ille aeris rauci canor increpat et vox auditur fractos sonitus imitata tubarum;
tum trepidae inter se coëunt pinnisque coruscant spiculaque exacuunt rostris aptantque lacertos, et circa reges ipsa ad praetoria densae miscentur magnisque vocant clamoribus hostem. ergo ubi ver nactae sudum camposque patentes, erumpunt portis: concurritur aethere in alto; fit sonitus; magnum mixtae glomerantur in orbem praecipitesque cadunt; non densior ære grando nec de concussa tantum pluit ilice glandis. ipsi per medias acies insignibus alis ingentes animos angusto in pectore versant, usque adeo obnixi non cedere, dum gravis aut hos aut hos versa fuga victor dare terga subegit. hi motus animorum atque haec certamina tanta pulseris exigui iactu compressa quiescunt.

verum ubi ductores acie revocaveris ambo, deterior qui visus, eum, ne prodigus obsit, dede neci; melior vacua sine regnet in aula. alter erit maculis auro squalentibus ardens; nam duo sunt genera: hic melior, insignis et ore et rutilis clarus squamis; ille horridus alter desidia, latamque trahens inglorius alvum. ut binae regum facies, ita corpora plebis. namque aliae turpes horrent, ceu pulvere ab alto cum venit et sicco terram spuit ore viator aridus; elucent aliae et fulgore coruscant, ardentes auro et paribus lita corpora guttis. haec potior suboles, hinc caeli tempore certo dulcia mella premes, nec tantum dulcia, quantum et liquida et durum Bacchi domitura saporem.

at cum incerta volant caeloque examina ludunt contemnuntque favos et frigida tecta relinquent, instabiles animos ludo prohibebis inani.
nec magnus prohibere labor; tu regibus alas eripe; non illis quisquam cunctantibus altum ire iter aut castris audebit vellere signa.

invitent croceis halantes floribus horti et custos furum atque avium cum falce saligna Hellespontiaci servet tutela Priapi.

ipse thymum pinosque ferens de montibus altis tecta serat late circum, cui talia curae;
ipse labore manum duro terat, ipse feraces figat humo plantas et amicos inriget imbres.

atque equidem, extremo ni iam sub fine laborum vela traham et terris festinem advertere proram, forsitan et, pingues hortos quae cura colendi ornaret, canerem, biferique rosaria Paesti, quoque modo potis gauderent intiba rivis et virides apio ripae, tortusque per herbam cresceret in ventrem cucumis; nec sera comantem narcissum aut flexi tacuissem vimen acanthi pallentesque hederas et amantes litorа myrtos.

namque sub Oebaliae memini me turribus altis, qua niger umectat flaventia culta Galaesus, Corycium vidisse senem, cui paуca relictì iugera ruris erant, nec fertilis illа iuvencis nec pecori opportuna seges nec commoda Baccho.
hic rarum tamen in dumis holus alpaque circum 130
lilia verbenasque premens vescumque papaver, regum acquabat opes animis, seraque revertens notce domum dapibus mensas onerabat inemptis.
primus vere rosam atque autumno carpere poma, et cum tristis hienips etiamnum frigore saxa 135
rumperet et glacie cursus frenaret aquarum, ille comam mollis iam tondebat hyacinthi
aestatem increpitans seram Zephyrosque morantes.
ergo apibus fetis idem atque examine multo primus abundare et spumantia cogere pressis mella favis; illi tiliae atque uberrima pinus, quotque in flore novo pomis se fertilis arbos induerat, totidem autumno matura tenebat.
ille etiam seras in versum distulit ulmos eduramque pirum et spinos iam pruna ferentes 140
iamque ministrantem platanum potantibus umbras.
verum haec ipse equidem spatiis exclusus iniquis praetereo atque aliis post me memoranda relinquo.
nunc age, naturas apibus quas Iuppiter ipse
addidit, expediam, pro qua mercede canoros 145
Curetum sonitus crepitantiaque aera secutae Dictaeo caeli regem pavere sub antro.
solae communes natos, consortia tecta urbis habent, magnisque agitant sub legibus aevum, et patriam solae et certos novere Penates; 150
venturaeque hiemis memores aestate laborem experiuntur et in medium quaesita reponunt. namque aliae victu invigilant et foedere pacto exercentur agris; pars intra saepta domorum Narcissi laerimam et lentum de cortice gluten prima favis ponunt fundamina, deinde tenaces suspendunt ceras; aliae spem gentis adultos educunt fetus; aliae purissima mella stipant, et liquido distendunt nectare cellas. sunt, quibus ad portas ecedid custodia sorti, inque vicem speculantur aquas et nubila caeli; aut onera accipiunt venientum, aut amine facto ignavum fucos pecus a praesepibus arcent. fervet opus, redolentque thymo fragrantia mella. ae veluti lentis Cyclopes fulmina massis cum properant, alii taurinis follibus auras accipiunt redduntque, alii stridentia tingunt aera lacu; gemit inpositis incudibus Aetna; illi inter sese magna vi bracchia tollunt in numerum, versantque tenaci forcipe ferrum: non aliter, si parva licet componere magnis, Cecropias innatus apes amor urguet habendi, munere quamque suo. grandaevis oppida curae et munire favos et daedala fingere tecta. at fessae multa referunt se nocte minores, crura thymo plenae; pascuntur et arbuta passim et glaucas salices casiamque ercorumque rubentem et pinguem tiliam et ferrugineos hyacinthos. omnibus una quies operum, labor omnibus unus:
mane ruunt portis; nusquam mora; rursus easdem
vesper ubi e pastu tandem decedere campis admonuit, tum tecta petunt, tum corpora curant;
fit sonitus mussantque oras et limina circum.
post, ubi iam thalamis se composuere, siletur in noctem fessosque sopor suus occupat artus.
nec vero a stabulis pluvia inpendente recedunt longius, aut credunt caelo adventantibus Euris;
sed circum tutae sub moenibus urbis aquantur, excursusque breves temptant, et saepe lapillos,
ut cumbae instabiles fluctu iactante saburram, tollunt; his sese per inania nubila librant.
illum adeo placuisse apibus mirabere morem,
quod neque concubitu indulgent nec corpora segnes
in Venerem solvunt aut fetus nixibus edunt; verum ipsae e foliis natos, e suavibus herbis ore legunt, ipsae regem parvosque Quirites sufficiunt, aulasque et cerea regna refingunt.
saepe etiam duris errando in cotibus alas attrivere uttroque animam sub fasce dedere:
tantus amor florum et generandi gloria mellis.
ergo ipsas quamvis angusti terminus aevi excipiat—neque enim plus septima ducitur aestas—at genus inmortale manet multosque per annos stat fortuna domus et avi numerantur avorum.
practerea regem non sic Aegyptos et ingens Lydia nec populi Parthorum aut Medus Hydaspes observant. rege incolumi mens omnibus una est;
amisso rupere fidem constructaque mella diripuere ipsae et crates solvere favorum.
ille operum custos, illum admirantur et omnes 215
circumstant fremitu denso stipantque frequentes, et saepe attollunt umeris et corpora bello obiectant pulchramque petunt per vulnera mortem.

his quidam signis atque haec exempla secuti esse apibus partem divinae mentis et haustus 220
aetherios dixere; deum namque ire per omnes terrasque tractusque maris caelumque profundum;
hinc pecudes, armenta, viros, genus omne ferarum, quamque sibi tenues nascentem arcessere vitas;
scilicet huc reddi deinde ac resoluta referri 225
omnia, nec morti esse locum, sed viva volare sideris in numerum atque alto succedere caelo.

si quando sedem angustam servataque mella thesauris relines, prius haustu sparsus aquarum ora fove fumosque manu praetende sequaces. 230
bis gravidos cogunt fetus, duo tempora messis, Taïgete simul os terris ostendit honestum
Plias, et Oceani spretos pede reppulit amnes, aut eadem sidus fugiens ubi Piscis aquosi tristior hibernas caelo descendit in undas. 235
illis ira modum supra est, laesaeque venenum morsibus inspirant et spicula caeca relinquunt adfixae venis, animasque in vulnera ponunt.
sin duram metues hiemem parcesque futuro contunsosque animos et res miserabere fractas, 240
at suffire thymo cerasque recidere inanes quis dubitet? nam saepe favos ignotus adedit stello et lucifugis congesta cubilia blattis, immunisque sedens aliena ad pabula fucus;
aut asper crabro inparibus se inmiscuit armis,
aut dirum tinea genus, aut invisa Minervae laxos in foribus suspendit aranea casses.
quo magis exhaustae fuerint, hoc acrius omnes incumbent generis lapsi sacire ruinas, complebuntque foros et floribus horrea texent.

si vero, quoniam casus apibus quoque nostros vita tulit, tristi languebunt corpora morbo—quad iam non dubiis poteris cognoscere signis:
continuo est aegris alius color; horrida vultum deformat macies; tum corpora luce carentum exportant tectis et tristia funera ducunt;
aut illae pedibus conexae ad limina pendent, aut intus clausis cunctantur in aedibus, omnes ignavaeque fame et contracto frigore pigrae;
tum sonus auditur gravior tractimque susurrant, frigidus ut quondam silvis inmurmurat Auster,
ut mare sollicitum stridit refluentibus undis, aestuat ut clausis rapidus fornacibus ignis—
hic iam galbaneos suadebo incendere odores mellaque harundineis inferre canalibus, ultro hortantem et fessas ad pabula nota vocantem.
proderit et tunsom gallae admiscere saporem considit scopulo medius, numerumque recenset. cuius Aristaeo quoniam est oblata facultas, vix defessa senem passus componere membra cum clamore ruit magno manicisque iacentem occupat. ille suae contra non inmemor artis omnia transformat sese in miracula rerum, ignemque horribilemque feram fluviumque liquentem. verum ubi nulla fugam reperit fallacia, victus in sese redit atque hominis tandem ore locutus: 'nam quis te, iuvenum confidentissime, nostras iussit adire domos? quidve hinc petis?' inquit. at ille:

'scis, Proteu, scis ipse; neque est te fallere quicquam sed tu desine velle. deum praeccepta seuti venimus, hinc lassis quaesitum oracula rebus.'
tantum effatus. ad haec vates vi denique multa ardentes oculos intorsit lumine glauco, et graviter frendens sic fatis ora resolvit:

'non te nullius exercent numinis irae; magna luis commissa: tibi has miserabilis Orpheus haudquaquam ob meritum poenas, ni fata resistant, suscitat, et rapta graviter pro coniuge saevit. illa quidem, dum te fugeret per flumina praeceps, inmanem ante pedes hydrium moritura puella servantem ripas alta non vidit in herba. at chorus aequalis Dryadum clamore supremos inplerunt montes; flerunt Rhodopeiae arces altaque Pangaea et Rhesi Mavortia tellus
atque Getae atque Hebrus et Actias Orithyia ipse cava solans aegrum testudine amorem te, dulcis coniunx, te solo in litore secum, te veniente die, te decedente canebat.
Taenarias etiam fauces, alta ostia Ditis, et caligantem nigra formidine lucum nesciaque humanis precibus mansuescere corda.

at cantu commotae Erebi de sedibus imis umbrae ibant tenues simulacraque luce carentum, quam multa in foliis avium se milia condunt,
vesper ubi aut hibernus agit de montibus imber, matres atque viri defunctaque corpora vita magnánimum heroum, pueri innuptaeque puellae, inpositique rogis iuvenes ante ora parentum;
quos circum limus niger et deformis harundo

atque Ixionii vento rota constitit orbis.
iamque pedem referens casus evaserat omnes redditaque Eurydice superas veniebat ad auras pone sequens,—namque hanc dederat Proserpina legem—
cum subita incautum dementia cepit amantem, ignoscenda quidem, scirent si ignoscere Manes:
restitit, Eurydicenque suam iam luce sub ipsa inmemor heu victusque animi respexit. ibi omnis effusus labor, atque inmitis rupta tyranni foedera, terque fragor stagnis auditus Avernis. illa 'quis et me,' inquit, 'miseram et te perdidit, Orpheu, quis tantus furor? en iterum crudelia retro fata vocant conditque natantia lumina somnus. iamque vale: feror ingenti circumdata nocte invalidasque tibi tendens, heu non tua, palmas!' dixit et ex oculis subito, ceu fumus in auras commixtus tenues, fugit diversa, neque illum prensantem nequiquam umbras et multa volentem dicere praeterea vidit, nec portitor Orci amplius obiectam passus transire paludem. quid faceret? quo se rapta bis coniuge ferret? quo fletu Manes, qua numina voce moveret? illa quidem Stygia nabat iam frigida cumba. septem illum totos perhibent ex ordine menses rupe sub aëria deserti ad Strymonis undam flevisse et gelidis haec evolvisse sub antris, mulcentem tigres et agentem carmine quercus; qualis populea maerens philomela sub umbra amissos queritur fetus, quos durus arator observans nido inplumes detraxit; at illa flet noctem ramoque sedens miserabile carmen integrat et maestis late loca questibus inplet. nulla Venus, non ulli animum flexere hymenaei.
solus Hyperboreas glacies Tanaimque nivalem arvaque Rhipaeis numquam viduata pruinis lustrabat, raptam Eurydicen atque inrita Ditis dona querens; spretae Ciconum quo munere matres inter sacra deum nocturnique orgia Bacchi discerptum latos iuvenem sparsere per agros.
tum quoque marmorea caput a cervice revulsum gurgite cum medio portans Oeagrius Hebrus volveret, Eurydicen vox ipsa et frigida lingua
a miseram Eurydicen! anima fugiente vocabat; Eurydicen toto referebant flumine ripac.'
haec Proteus, et se iactu dedit aequor in altum, quaque dedit, spumantem undam sub vertice torsit.
at non Cyrene; namque ultro adfata timentem:
'nate, licet tristes animo deponere curas.
haec omnis morbi causa, hinc miserabile Nymphae,
cum quibus illa choros lucis agitabat in altis, exitum misere apibus. tu munera supplex
tende petens pacem et faciles venerare Napaeas;
namque dabunt veniam votis irasque remittent.
sed modus orandi qui sit, prius ordine dicam.
quattuor eximios praestanti corpore tauros,
qui tibi nunc viridis depascunt summa Lycaeai, delige, et intacta totidem cervice iuvencas.
quattuor his aras alta ad delubra dearum constitue, et sacrum iugulis demitte cruorem, corporaque ipsa boum frondoso desere luco.
post, ubi nona suos Aurora ostenderit ortus, inferias Orphei Lethaea papavera mittes et nigram mactabis ovem lucumque revises;
placatam Eurydicen vitula venerabere caesa.'
haud mora; continuo matris praeccepta facessit;
ad delubra venit, monstratas excitat aras,
quattuor eximios praestanti corpore tauros
ducit et intacta totidem cervice iuvenas.
post, ubi nona suos Aurora induxerat ortus, inferias Orphei mittit lucumque revisit.
hic vero subitum ae dictu mirabile monstrum aspiciunt, liquefacta boum per viscera toto stridere apes utero et ruptis effervere costis, inmensasque trahi nubes, iamque arbore summa confluere et lentis uvam demittere ramis.

haec super arvorum cultu pecorumque canebam et super arboribus, Caesar dum magnus ad altum fulminat Euphraten bello victorque volentes per populos dat iura viamque adfectat Olympo.
illo Vergilium me tempore dulcis alebat, Parthenope, studiis florentem ignobilis oti,
carmina qui lusi pastorum audaxque iuventa,
Tityre, te patulae cecini sub tegmine fagi.
NOTES.

1-7. Next I shall sing of bees, and here too ask thy favour, Maecenas, while I relate the marvellous history of these tiny creatures. Humble is the theme but great the glory, if but Apollo hear a poet's prayer.

1. protinus] Marks this book as a continuation of the preceding ones. After dealing with (1) the culture of the fields in Bk. i., (2) the management of trees in Bk. ii., and (3) the care of cattle in Bk. iii., he now comes to the last division (partem) of his subject, and asks for it too (etiam) the favour of Maecenas, as he had already asked it for the three former divisions.

aerii, caelestia: The ancients believed that honey fell in the form of dew from heaven. The belief arises from the existence of honey-dew, a glutinous saccharine substance which in sultry weather is found covering the leaves of many trees, especially oaks, elms, and limes, and is eagerly consumed by bees. It is generally regarded as an exudation of sap (cf. Ecl. 4. 30 et durae quercus sudabunt rosida melia), but much of it is also secreted by various species of aphides which live upon the leaves. The abundance of this 'heavenly gift' will, according to Virgil, mark the return of the golden age (Ecl. 4. 30), as the close of it was marked by its withdrawal, cf. G. 1. 131 mellaque decussit foliis.

3. admiranda ...] This line gives the key-note to the whole book. It is in making 'little things' into a 'marvellous spectacle' that Virgil displays throughout his utmost skill. The opening words of the next line illustrate how this will be done, viz. by speaking of bees as if they were human beings, animated with human interests, and governed by all the laws of human society. For the antithesis of admiranda levium, cf. G. 3. 290 angustis hunc addere rebus honorem, and in an opposite manner Hor. Od. 13. 3. 72 conamur tenues grandia.
5. mores] 'character'. studia, 'pursuits'. Mores denote qualities which are more fixed than studia; the latter, if persisted in, pass into the former (abeunt studia in mores); and as studia create mores, so the mores of individuals tend to create the more permanent mores of a community, and it is of this 'national' or 'hereditary character', so conspicuous both in the Romans and in bees, that Virgil seems here thinking. populos: 'tribes', perhaps with a recollection of the various 'peoples' and 'tribes' which had been amalgamated into the Roman state.

6. in tenui: 'the toil is on a trivial theme, but not trivial the fame'; cf. Tac. A. 4. 32 in arto et inglorius labor, and for n. adj. used as subst. 157 n. si quem...: 'for him') whose the adverse powers permit and whose prayer Apollo hears.' Notice the skill of si quem: Virgil does not say that his own 'glory' will be great, but speaks generally of any poet who attempts the theme. Some take laeva = 'favourable', but this is inconsistent with sinunt, and, though in augury thunder on the left was a favourable sign (cf. Aen. 2. 693; 9. 361; Cic. de Div. 2. 39. 81), yet laeva, like sinistra, is generally (as opposed to dextra) used in a bad sense, cf. Æcl. 1. 16; Aen. 2. 54; 10. 275. For the division of deities into 'good' and 'evil', cf. Aul. Gell. 5. 12 quosdam deos, ut prodessent, celebrabant, quosdam, ut ne obsessent, placabant.

8–32. Firstly, the hives should be out of the way of the wind, of cattle which trample down the flowers, of lizards, and of birds which prey on the bees. On the other hand there must be water, and trees to give shade and tempt the swarms to settle on them. In the water, whether running or stagnant, there should be stones to settle on, while casia, wild thyme, and beds of violets should be planted near.

8. principio] 'firstly'; a formal and didactic word, similarly used G. 2. 9 principio arboribus varia est natura creandis.

9. quo neque sit... aditus... neque oves... insultent] 'so that thither neither is there approach for winds... nor (there) do sheep trample on'. The final force of quo (=ut co) extends to both clauses, but in the second some such word as ibi must be supplied.
10. ferre ... prohibent] 'prevent their carrying.' The infinitive is so convenient metrically that its use is very frequent in poetry after verbs of desiring, asking, forbidding, trying, etc., which would not ordinarily take it in prose, cf. 23 invitēt decedere; 84 obnixi non cedere; 117 festinem advertere; 249 incumbent sarcire; 489 scirent ignoscere. Cf. its use after adjectives, 134 n.

13. et] 'also'. squalentia, 'scaly', cf. 91 n.

14. meropes] The merops apiaster or 'bee-eater', a bird of the fissirostral tribe.

15. Procne] i.e. the swallow. Procne, daughter of Pandion, king of Athens, was wife of Tereus, and to avenge her husband's infidelity slew her son and served him up to his father for a meal. When pursued by Tereus she was changed into a swallow and her sister Philomela into a nightingale. The blood upon her hands is still supposed to stain her plumage, and in fact the common chimney-swallow has a deep claret-coloured patch on the throat.

16. omnia ...] 'for they make complete havoc by carrying off the bees themselves as they fly...'; the second clause, ipsasque ... escam, explains the first. Some contrast omnia with ipsas, as though birds not only destroyed everything else but also even carried off the bees. Surely, however, birds do not 'destroy everything', though they may make 'utter destruction among bees. volantes might be a subst. = 'winged creatures' and so 'bees', but it would be awkward to call bees volantes here, where they are contrasted with birds, which are also volantes; hence it is best taken as a participle.

18. at liquidi fontes ...] 'Water is essential during spring and summer; a shallow pebbly stream in the vicinity will, therefore, be most advantageous, where they can drink without danger of drowning. Its absence should be supplied by artificial means; and a shallow vessel of water ... having a few smooth round stones thrown into it (cf. 25) of a size to project above the surface and afford footing to the drinkers, will answer the end. The neighbourhood of large sheets of water, however, or of broad rivers, is injurious; the little foragers, in crossing during high winds (cf. 29) or dashing rains, perishing by hundreds in a single day'. Naturalist's Library, Vol. V., p. 160.

20. vestibulum] In a Roman house the street door stood somewhat back, and the ‘vestibule’ is the space in front of it, flanked on either side by the walls of the house (cf. Aen. 2. 442; 6. 273). Here it is merely = ‘the entrance’.

21. reges] ‘kings’: the ancients regarded the queen bee as the male.

22. vere suo] ‘in their own spring’, ‘in the spring they (the swarms) love’: as bees swarm in the spring, the spring is said to belong to them. Suus often thus refers to a single word; cf. 190 n.

23. vicina; 24. obviaque] Note the position and force of both adjectives. The bank is to be close by ‘with a neighbourly invitation’, and the tree to ‘meet and detain them with leafy hospitality’. decedere calori: cf. Ecl. 8. 89 decedere nocti, ‘retire before the advance of night’; so here ‘retire from the presence of the heat’.

25. in medium] sc. umorem, or, more probably, in medium is merely ‘into the middle’, cf. 157 n. stabit, referring to stagna.

26. transversas ...] ‘fling willows across and hurl in mighty rocks’. Note the exaggeration and also in 29: in Varro (3. 16. 27) the grandia saxa are lapilli ... ubi adsidere et bibere possint, and the stream, which Virgil says is to be bridged with willows, is to be not more than ‘two or three fingers deep’.

28. morantes] ‘lingering’, i.e. staying too long out in spite of threats of rain, and so getting caught in a storm.

29. sparserit] ‘sprinkled’, with rain. aut praeceps ...: ‘or headlong Eurus plunged in Ocean’; praeceps = καταταραγὼν, ‘coming down in a sudden squall’.

30. casiae] called humiles, G. 2. 213, and mentioned with rosemary as a common herb; entwined in a nosegay, Ecl. 2. 49, ‘with other sweet (scented) herbs’. Martyn rightly distinguishes it from the Greek κασίδα, which was a shrub with aromatic bark, growing in Arabia, from which a costly perfume was distilled, and which is referred to in G. 2. 466 as an article of luxury, cf. Ps. xlv. 8 σμύρνα καὶ σταφίς καὶ κασία ἀπὸ τῶν ἱματίων σου: Job xlii. 14, ‘Kezia’.

33–50. The hives should have small entrances as a protection against heat and cold. Bees suffer from both, and consequently themselves stop up every crevice with propolis and wax (as for the same reason they sometimes hive underground or in a hollow tree), but you too must help them by plastering over the hive with mud and leaves. No yews must be planted near them, nor crab-shells burned; marshy ground, the smell of mud, and echoes are disliked by them.

33. ipsa] Emphatic: the hives ‘themselves’ as opposed to their surroundings. corticibus: ‘the bark of the cork tree was called cortex by way of eminence’, Martyn. Columella recommends it as ‘warm in winter and cool in summer’, cork being, of course, a non-conductor of heat.

34. alvaria] not alvearia (as Conington reads), for though alveus, m., ‘hollow vessel’, and alvus, f., ‘belly’, are often confused, yet Varro, Pliny, and Columella commonly use alvus for a hive in cases where the gender makes alveus impossible, e.g. utilissimas alvos.

36. cogit] = co-agit, ‘makes solid’, the opposite of remittit (cf. Tib. 3. 5. 4 quum se purpureo vere remittit humus) ‘makes give’, or ‘yield so that it runs’ (liquefacta proleptic, cf. 104n.). Honey should be neither solid nor liquid.

38. nequiquam] ‘idly’, ‘with no real cause’. tenuia: scanned as a dactyl, i and u being semi-consonantal (= y and w) and sometimes so treated in poetry, cf. 243 stellio et, spondee; 279 parietibus, dacty1; Aen. 5. 432 genua labant.

39. fuco et floribus] ‘with gum’ or ‘paste from flowers’; hendiadys, cf. 99 n. The substance referred to is certainly not pollen, as Conington and others take it, for (1) fucus is not a powder, but either a dye or something which can be smeared or daubed over anything, like rouge; (2) from comparison with 160 Narcissi lacrimam et lentum de cortice gluten, where this substance is described as ‘the tears of the Narcissus and sticky gum from bark’, it is clear that Virgil considers it as sometimes a secretion of flowers, sometimes an exudation of trees, and N. lacrimam is parallel to fuco et floribus here, as gluten lentium is to lentum gluten; (3) the actual substance thus used by bees is propolis, a glutinous substance 'employed in fixing the less adhesive wax to the roof of the hive, and in stopping up any crevices', which Huber has seen them collecting from a sort of varnish which exudes from the buds of the white poplar. Pollen, on the other hand, is a sort of dust collected from the anthers of flowers and stored up, as 'bee-bread', for feeding the young larvae.

oras, 'edges', probably of the 'crevices,' spiramenta.

40. haec [...] 'for this very purpose', viz. of stopping up chinks. This shows that gluten is the same thing as fucus et flores, being used for the same purpose.

42. effossis] Probably Virgil means 'excavated' by themselves: the humble-bee does actually so excavate its nest underground.

43. fovere Larem] 'have kept their house warm' or 'snug'. Foreo is = 'keep warm', especially by holding to the breast or as birds keep their nest warm when sitting; cf. 56 progeniem nidosque fovent, where the bees are said, like birds, to 'keep warm' their offspring and their nests'; G. 3. 420 forit humum of a snake lying close in its hole; Aen. 9. 57 castra fovere; 1. 718 gremio foet; 4. 686 sinu germanam fovere, and so to 'fondle', Ecl. 3. 4 Neaeram foet; Aen. 4. 193 fovere inter se. Then it is used of warm medical applications—fomenta, 'poultices', and so of any application to the surface of anything, cf. 46 unque foveus, 'anoint to keep them warm'; 230 ora fove, G. 2. 135 ora fovent, 'rinse'.

44. antro] i.e. which is 'a cave' to them.

45. tu] Strong didactic emphasis, cf. 62, 106. tamen: i.e. although they do so much for themselves, 'nevertheless do thou ...'.

47. taxum] The yew was considered poisonous (taxi nocentes, G. 2. 257), and specially injurious to bees, cf. Ecl. 9. 30 sic trua Cyreneas fugiant examina taxos. neve ...: bees have a strong dislike to some smells. Kennedy says that 'burnt crabs were used as a specific manure for certain trees'.

48. altae ...] 'and put no trust in a deep marsh, or (in a place) where ... '; apparently both places are bad for the same reason, viz. the smell.
49. aut ubi...] How far bees possess the sense of hearing has been disputed, but it seems certain that they dislike noise, and an apiary situated near mills, smithies, or other noisy workshops is seldom prosperous.

50. vocisque...] 'and the echo of a voice rebounds after striking them (i.e. the rocks)'. Imago (= mimago, cf. imitor = mimitor, ‘mimic’) is the regular word for an echo: strictly it is the sound (vox) itself which strikes (offenditur) the rock and only the echo (imago) which 'rebounds'.

51-66. As soon as spring returns bees go forth in quest of honey, and begin to breed, build cells, and swarm. When they swarm they always make for trees and water. Attract them to such a spot by rubbing the boughs with sweet-scented herbs, and clash cymbals; they will readily settle on the prepared place and be easily hived.

51. quod superest] A formula of transition, borrowed from Lucretius, 'as to what remains', 'for the rest', 'furthermore'.

54. metunt] 'reap', 'harvest'; the same metaphor 231 messis. purpureos: 'bright', cf. Ecl. 9. 40, ver purpureum 'flower-decked spring'. The ancient purple had two characteristics: (1) its peculiar hue, the colour of clotted blood; (2) a remarkable sheen. Hence it may have been (1) purple or (2) 'gleaming', 'bright', as in Horace's purpurei olores (Od. 4. 1. 10). In 275 and 373 both ideas seem present in the word. libant, 'sip'.

55. leves] 'on light wings', 'lightly hovering', cf. Aen. 6. 17. hinc ... hinc ... hinc: not merely 'then ... then ... then' (hinc = post hoc) describing the succession of their acts, but rather 'therefore' (hinc = propter hoc). The result of the warm weather and their feast in the fields is that 'joyous with a marvellous delight', on their return home they busy themselves with the hive, building their cells, rearing their young, and finally (iam 58) pouring forth their superabundant population in a swarm. Cf. G. 1. 412, where the effect of fine weather on crows is described as producing exactly the same 'marvellous delight' in their homes.

57. excudunt] 'forge': a stately word, cf. Aen. 6. 847 excudent alii spirantia mollius aera.
59. nare ...] ‘float ’mid the liquid summer air’. Liquidus suggests two ideas: (1) liquid, (2) clear, pure: here in connection with nare the first is more prominent, but the other is present. Cf. G. 1. 404 liquidum in aere where both are equally suggested; Ecl. 6. 33 liquidus ignis where the first prevails; G. 1. 410 liquidas voces. Elsewhere it is used as an epithet of lux, vox, tempestas, mens, animus (= ‘serene’), voluptas.

60. obscuramque ...] ‘and marvel at the dark cloud trailing in the wind’; for trahe, cf. trahe nubes 557 of actual clouds, and for nubes metaphorically, cf. Aen. 7. 705 volucrum ... nubem.

61. contemplator] Mark the dignity of the word, and cf. G. 1. 187. It is borrowed from Lucretius (2. 114) and is strongly didactic in tone, this form of the imperative being especially used in laws.

62. iusos ...] ‘scatter the appointed scents’. iusos: either prescribed by those learned in the matter, or prescribed here by me, that is to say ‘pounded balm ...’.

63. melisphylla] μελισσόφυλλον, ‘balm’; probably the Latin apiastrum. cerinthae: ‘the name is from κηρίον, a honeycomb, because the flower abounds with a sweet juice like honey’—Martyn, who also says that it is the ‘yellow flowered honey-wort, and is one of the most common herbs all over Italy and Sicily’. He adds that it grows to a height of between one and two feet, so that ignobile had better be taken ‘lowly’ (= common) rather than ‘low-growing’ (for which cf. G. 2. 213 humiles casias), but it is difficult to be sure of the exact force of adjectives applied to plants the identification of which is doubtful.

64. Matris ...] i.e. Cybele, a Phrygian goddess, whose worship was introduced at Rome during the Hannibalic war, and who was identified with Earth ‘the Great Mother’ of all things. Her ritual was of an oriental character, and cymbals were used in her worship; for their use in the East cf. Ps. cl. 5. Our ‘key and warming-pan’ afford a striking contrast here with Virgil’s heroic style.

66. intima ... cunabula] i.e. the hive which is offered to the swarm. more suo indicates that they will be sure to do this: it is ‘their rule’.
67–87. When there are two rival kings and a battle between their forces is imminent, you will hear sounds as of a trumpet; the bees collect in crowds and prepare their weapons, especially round the quarters of their monarch. Then on a fine day they sally forth and the battle is waged in mid air, the combatants falling to the ground thick as hail or acorns, while the leaders more proudly among their troops, resolved to fight to the bitter end. All this strife is ended by flinging on them a little dust.

It is well known that two queens cannot exist together in a hive. If a strange queen is introduced into a hive a combat to the death takes place between her and the reigning monarch. Similarly, when the swarming season is over, any young queens left in the royal cells are liberated simultaneously (previously they are only liberated one by one when needed for a swarm), and allowed; or rather encouraged, by the other bees to fight to the death, the survivor being received as sovereign. These combats take place inside the hive, and seem only to be between the queens themselves. On the other hand actual fights between bees occur when, as often happens, the bees of an ill-stored hive attempt to plunder a richer one; see the famous description in Butler, 'Feminine Monarchie' (Oxford 1634), "Wen de teeves, having first mad\(^e\) an entri, begin to coom tik, and de tru\(^e\) bees perceiv\(^e\) demselves to be\(^e\) assaulted by many; dey suddenly mak\(^e\) an outcri\(^e\); and issuing out of deir holds by troops, prepar\(^e\) demsels to battel. Soom keep de gat\(^e\)s; soom flि\(^e\) about; soom run in again, to see wat is doon der\(^e\); soom begin to grapple wid the enimi; and dat wit suc a noise and din, as if de drun did sound an all-arm. Besid\(^e\)'s wic bas\(^e\) sound, you sal eftsoons in de heat of de battel, hear a more\(^e\) shrill and sharp not\(^e\), as it wer\(^e\) of a flut\(^e\); as saith Virgil, rox, auditur fractos sonitus imitata tubarum, wic, I am out of doubt, is tuned by deir generall commander, encooraging dem to fig\(^e\) for deir Prine\(^e\), deir lives, and deir goods. On de oder sid\(^e\), de defendants will behav\(^e\) demselves as bravely, not giving any rest to de enimi; part encountring wit dem dat ar widout ...' Virgil seems to have blended these two quite separate forms of encounter into one imaginative scene.
NOTES.

67. sin autem ...] With elaborate art Virgil gives his language here the appearance of careless ease. He begins ‘but if they have gone forth to battle’, then breaks off with a description (nam ... hostem 76) of the cause of such frays and the preparation for them, gives an account of the battle itself 77-85, and finally S6, S7, tenders that advice to the bee-keeper which the opening words sin ... exierint lead us to expect, and which is the nominal reason for the whole paragraph. Some say that the irregularity of the construction reproduces ‘the enthusiasm with which the poet throws himself into the subject’ (Forbiger), or ‘the tumultuous emotions of the bees’ (Denticke), but there is nothing strongly passionate in the passage, which is rather highly artistic.

69. trepidantia bello] ‘trembling (i.e. with eager excitement) for the fray’; for the dat. cf. Aen. 7. 482 belloque animos accendit = in bellum. Others give ‘with war’, ‘with warlike ardour’.

70. namque ...] ‘for the well-known martial note of harsh-sounding brass urges on the laggards’; what the note is (viz. that of the trumpet) is immediately explained in the next clause.

Varro (3, 16) also alludes to a trumpet-like sound made by the ‘kings’ (duces), and it is known that in a hive where there are several unliberated young queens the actual queen is always trying to kill them in their cells, and is prevented by the workers—‘I saw her hasten to the other royal cell and attempt to tear it open ..., but the workers pulled her violently back. At every repulse she ... emitted the shrill monotonous peep, peep, peep, so well known to bee-masters, while the unhatched queen emitted the same kind of sound, but in a hoarser tone, the consequence of her confined situation.’ (Naturalist’s Library, Vol. 5. Edin. 1843.) This piping sound of the actual queen to which the young queens respond ‘in a voice sounding hoarse from the recesses of their prison’ is constantly heard just before swarming, which is also a period of great agitation in the hive, so that Virgil seems writing here from genuine observation.

72. fractos ...] Cf. the well-known line of Ennius, at tuba terribili sonitu tarantara dixit.

73. trepidae ...] ‘eagerly they throng together with flashing pinions’. Notice that inter se coeunt is not ‘join battle;’
Corusco = 'shake', 'make to vibrate', is constantly used intransitively = 'flash', 'gleam' of the light which any bright body in movement gives off: both it and coruscus are especially used in connection with armour and military weapons; hence the choice of it here.

74. spiculaque exacuunt rostris] Two renderings are given (1) 'sharpen their stings with their beaks', (2) 'sharpen the stings to' or 'for their beaks'.

(1) As the sting of a bee is in its tail the action seems impossible. It has, however, been suggested that a bee's action in cleaning itself, when it first scrapes the abdomen with its legs and then removes the dirt from the legs with its mandibles (rostris), has been mistaken for a process of sharpening the tip of the tail or the sting which it contains.

(2) Though the head of a bee is only furnished with mandibles and a proboscis for collecting honey, yet it is quite possible that Virgil considered it to be actually armed with some weapon of offence which he compares to a 'dart' (spiculum). On the other hand spicula in 237 is certainly = 'stings'.

Rostris will suit either interpretation, for rostrum (from rodo, 'the gnawing' or 'biting thing') may describe either the whole 'head' of an animal, or the special part with which it bites, gnaws, etc. = 'mandibles', 'bill', 'beak', etc.

75. praetoria] Cf. Shakespeare's 'the tent-royal of their emperor', line 153 n.

76. miscentur] 'crowd,' 'throng'.

77. ergo] 'therefore,' i.e. as the natural result of all these warlike preparations. ver sudum: 'a clear' or 'fine spring day'; bees never venture out in rain. camposque patentes: the 'open field' is the clear sky.

78. concurritur] For intransitive verbs used impersonally in the passive, cf. 189 siletur; 375 perventum est. aethere in alto: Bees do grapple with one another in the air, but the actual struggle takes place on the ground. 'When two bees are struggling in this manner they descend to the ground, for in the air they would not be able to get purchase enough to be sure of striking each other. They then engage in a hand-to-hand fight .... They are continually making stabs with their stings ...' (Figuier).
NOTES.

79. magnum ...] ‘crowded together they are rolled into a mighty mass’; orbis is the ball-shaped mass of struggling combatants.

80. praecipitesque cadunt] ‘and fall head foremost’. Notice the double sense of cadunt; warriors ‘fall’ on the ground and the bees ‘fall’ to it.

81. tantum ... glandis] lit. ‘so much of acorns’; glandis is used collectively, as miles is often = ‘soldiers’, cf. 227 n. ‘Nor do the acorns rain so thick from ...’.

82. ipsi] ‘they themselves’, i.e. clearly the chiefs in contrast with their followers. insignibus alis: ‘with conspicuous pinions’. The wings of a queen bee are comparatively small, but Columella, 9, 10, describes them as specially beautiful, sunt reges ... minus amplis pinnis pulchri coloris et nitidi.

83. ingentes ...] ‘keep alive in their tiny heart a giant’s courage’. animi in the plur. is regularly used = ‘temper’, ‘courage’, ‘spirit’, and versare implies activity. The phrase animos versare must be distinguished from animum versare (Aen. 4. 286 animum per omnia versat; 630 animum partes versabat in omnes) = ‘turn the mind in every direction’, ‘think carefully’. For the contrast between size and spirit, cf. Homer’s description of Tydeus, II. 5. 801 μικρὸς μὲν ἔν χεῖρ ἔμας, ἄλλα μαχητῆς.

84. usque adeo ...] ‘still steadfast not to yield, until at last the conqueror has driven the one side or the other to turn their backs routed in flight’. For obnixus, which describes a man who plants his foot firm and will not budge, cf. Livy 6. 12. 8 (velim) obnixos vos stabili gradu hostium impetum excipere, and for the infinitive following it, cf. 10 n. Kennedy, who, like many others, considers that a subj. is needed, takes subegit as ‘a syncopated form of subegerit’, but this is improbable, nor is the subj. required, for, though where the idea of purpose is clear dum and donec are followed by the subj., yet Virgil here merely describes what actually happens. He does not say that the resolution of the chiefs is ‘not to yield until ...’, which would require a subj., but he describes them as actually steadfast in keeping their ground, until at last one army is routed. In so far as obnixos suggests a mental resolution or purpose, that resolution is contained in the words non cedere, and does not extend to the clause introduced by dum which simply relates a fact. For adeo dum with indic., cf. Plaut. Merc. 3. 4. 72, and usque adeo donec with indic. is fairly common. hos: masc. because he thinks of them as soldiers and not as bees; so quisquam 107.

86, 87. The humour of these lines is obvious, the heroic description of battle which precedes being in ludicrous contrast with the simple expedient by which the combat is ended. Editors however ignore the pathos which seems to be latent in Virgil's words when read as a reflection on the vanity of human ambition—all passions and rivalries are laid to rest for ever 'with the flinging of a little dust'. Possibly Virgil did not intend this, and yet the words pulveris iactu might certainly suggest burial to a Roman ear, cf. Hor. Od. 1. 28. 35 licebit | iniecto ter pulvere curras. On the other hand Varro, who recommends flinging dust on a swarm to make them settle, uses exactly the same words—iaciundo in eas pulverem—with no secondary meaning, and so Pliny 11. 18 dimicatio iniectu pulveris aut fumo tota discutitur.

88-102. After the combat kill the worse-looking of the two kings: the better one will be bright and brilliant, the other dark-looking, rough, and fat-paunched. So too with the common bees: they will be like their leaders, and it is only the better sort which will form a good stock and yield honey at once abundant and well-flavoured.

89. ne prodigus ...] 'him, lest his wastefulness bring ruin, deliver to execution': for prodigus, cf. the description in 94; he eats and does no work. Clearly Virgil intends this precept about killing the king to apply to his followers also, who are described as exactly like him, and who, it is implied from 100-102, will be a worthless stock and produce no honey.

90. vacua: i.e. without a rival. sine regnet: 'let him reign'.

91. alter...] The sentence is interrupted; instead of going on with a second alter Virgil breaks off with an explanation, which is intended to show why you will be sure to find one of the two kings 'worse-looking' (deterior qui visus) than the other, the fact being that there are two 'breeds' (genera) and a king of the better breed is easily 'distinguished (insignis) both by shape (ore) and the brilliancy of his ruddy scales'. 'Virgil has here accurately described the two commonest forms or varieties of Apis mellifica, viz. A. mellifica var. ligustica (the Ligurian bee) and A. mellifera. The Ligurian bee is distinguished by bright brown spots on the three first segments of the abdomen; it is a stronger, more vigorous and glossy form than the other, which is more hairy and duller in appearance. Although gentler under human manipulation the Ligurian bee is much fiercer in resisting foes and would certainly defeat the other variety in battle. In a combat between bees of the same variety the difference Virgil describes would not be seen. (O. H. L.)

maculis auro squalentibus ardens is exactly = rutilis clarus squamis, for Virgil undoubtedly connects sualeo with squama, cf. Aen. 10. 314 tunicam squalentem auro, and 9. 707 duplici squama lorica fidelis et auro, which both describe armour made of gold plates overlaid like scales. The phrase describes the bee as if he were an armed chief—'ablaze with markings of golden mail'.

92. meliör, insignis] Cf. 453 n. insignis from its position seems to qualify both et ore and et r. clarus squamis, see last note.

93. horridus] 'rough', 'shaggy', 'unkempt', cf. horrent 96. The adj. is perpetually used to express the effect of neglect (cf. desidia here) on persons or things.

96. ceu pulvere ...] 'as when the scorched wayfarer comes from deep dust (i.e. a road deep in dust) and spits the dirt from his parched mouth'. Columella (9. 10) quoting this passage, writes deterior sordido sputo (‘spittle’) similis, tam foedus quam pulvere ... viator, and so makes Virgil compare the bee to the actual spittle of a dusty traveller. Such a coarse comparison seems however precluded, not merely as a matter of taste, but because it is the condition of the traveller himself which is the main subject of the sentence, the fact of his spitting being introduced incidentally to illustrate that condition. Moreover, throughout, the bees are compared to men and not to things, while the words turpes horrent, which Virgil applies to these bees, are far more applicable to men who have been plodding through dust and dirt than to spittle.

99. ardentes ...] Probably the construction is 'ablaze as to their bodies spangled with gold and equal (i.e. symmetrically arranged) spots'. auro et guttis: 'spangles of gold'. An instance of hendiadys (ἐν διὰ δυσών) or the use of two words or phrases simply put side by side, instead of a single complex phrase in which the words qualify each other; cf. 39 fuco et floribus, 160 n.; G. 2. 192 pateris libamus et auro; Hor. 2. 7. 9 Philippos et celerem fugam, 'Philippi's hurried rout'.

100. certo] 'fixed', 'appointed', i.e. in spring and autumn, cf. 231. The meaning 'sure' is, however, also suggested.

101. premes] The honey was first allowed to drain out of the combs through a wicker sieve, and the remainder—which was inferior—was squeezed or pressed out, Col. 9. 15; cf. 140, and Hor. Epod. 2. 15 pressa mella.

nec tantum dulcia, quantum et ...] 'and not so sweet as both clear and fit to mellow the harsh flavour of wine'. Virgil does not say that the honey is not sweet, but that its sweetness (which is assumed to be great) is even excelled by its other qualities. The Romans mixed honey with wine to form mulsum, a drink taken immediately before dinner, cf. Hor. Sat. 2. 4. 24.

103-115. Directly, however, the bees begin to fly about vaguely and neglect the hive, pluck off the wings of the kings, as without a leader they will never go forth to battle. You must also tempt them to work by planting a garden near the hive with their favourite flowers and trees.

In this paragraph Virgil, after describing a battle between bees and how to put an end to it, explains how the bee-keeper may prevent the battle taking place at all.

104. frigid...]] 'leave the hives cold,' the opposite of fovere Larem 43. Frigida is proleptic, that is to say, the adjective 'anticipates' (προλαμβάνει) the effect produced by the action of the verb; the bees leave the hives and so make them cold; cf. 36 liquefacta remittit, 'melts into liquid'; 400 doli ... frangentur inanes, 'so that they become useless'; G. 1. 399 solutos ... iactare maniplos, 'toss to pieces'.

105. instabiles] 'giddy', 'unbalanced'. prohibebis: future of command (cf. 545), 'thou shalt check'.

106. tu] strong personal emphasis; Virgil gives his precept in a very didactic tone. Cf. 2. 241; 3. 163.
NOTES.

107. non illis] strongly emphatic, ‘not when they (the leaders) hesitate (i.e. to give battle) will any dare to go forth on high ...’. The language throughout is military, and breathes the strong Roman sense of discipline.

108. castris ... i.e. to go forth to battle, cf. G. 3. 236 signa movet, ‘advances the standards’.

110. Rude wooden figures of Priapus, painted red and with a wooden sickle in his hand, were regularly set up in gardens to protect them from thieves and birds, cf. Hor. Sat. 1. 8. 1-7. He was a god of fertility and specially worshipped at Lamp-sacus on the Hellespont. After custos, ‘guardian’, we should expect Priapus, but Virgil substitutes tutela Priapi, ‘and as a guard against ... , let the care of Priapus protect them’.

112. ipse ... ipse ... ipse] strongly emphasizing the personal pains which must be taken. thymum: ‘the thyme of the ancients is not our common thyme, but the thymus capitans, which now grows in plenty upon the mountains of Greece. The Attic honey was accounted the best because of the excellence of this sort of thyme which grows about Athens’ (Martyn.) pinos: the pine is also mentioned ‘in gardens’, Ecl. 7. 67. See too 141 and note.

113. cui talia curae] ‘(the man) to whom such things are a care (lit. ‘for a care’)’, i.e. the bee-keeper.

114. feraces plantas] In G. 2. 79 the words are used technically = ‘cuttings of a fruitful tree’ grafted on an unfruitful stem, but here merely = ‘prolific’ or ‘vigorous cuttings’.

115. inriget] sc. plantis.

116–148. Were I not eager to end my task, possibly I should have sung of gardening too, for I well remember seeing the wonders worked by an old man on a piece of neglected land near Tarentum. He was as proud as a king, growing flowers and vegetables, and living on his own produce. He always had the first roses and the first apples, while his hyacinths were in bloom long before winter was over. So his hives always prospered, the blossoms on his trees always came to fruit, and he transplanted trees even when full-grown. But space compels me to leave this theme to others.

“A graceful interpolation, sketching the plan of what might have been a fifth Georgic” (Conington).
116. equidem] Cf. 147 ipse equidem. This word (from e demonstrative and quidem) has no connection with ego, but is a simple adverb and can be used with the 2nd or 3rd person. None the less Virgil certainly seems to treat it as =ego quidem, cf. Ecl. 1. 11 non equidem invidro; 9. 7 certe equidem audieram; G. 1. 193 vidi equidem; 415 haud equidem credo. So here and 147 it emphasizes his own personal disability to deal with the theme in spite of its eminently poetical character. extremo ...: "were I not, almost at my labour's extreme goal, already furling (traham = contraham) sail ..., perchance too I might have been singing ... ". The change of tense in ni ... traham and forsitan ... canerem seems clearly intended to contrast what is actually happening with what might have happened. Kennedy's view that the apodosis to ni ... traham is to be found in forsitan = fors sit an 'there might be a chance that', seems artificial. For the naval metaphor, cf. G. 2. 41 pelagoque volans da vela patenti of commencing his song.

119. rosaria Paesti] Ov. Met. 15. 708; Prop. 5. 5. 61; Met. 4. 42. 10, etc. biferi: cf. δίφορος, δικαρπός, 'blooming twice in a year'.

ornaret] following the tense of canerem, 'I might have been singing what care of cultivation made gardens gay': so too gauderent, cresceret. We should use the present.

121. tortusque ...] 'and winding through the grass the cucumber grows into a belly'. tortus refers to the growth of the plant (cf. cucumis anquinas Varro, R. R. 1. 2. 25) more than to that of the fruit, which is perhaps rather 'a gourd' or 'melon' than a cucumber, which hardly grows into a 'belly'.

122. sera comantem] 'late-blooming'; for sera = adv., cf. 270 n. Theophrastus, H. P. 6. 6. 9 says that the narcissus is often called λειμον (= lilium), and adds δύσων δὲ σφόδρα, μέτα γαρ άκτούρον ἣ άνθησις καὶ περὶ ισημερίαν. Dioscorides says of it ἄνθος λευκόν, ἐσωθέν δὲ προκόωδες ἐπ' ἐνίων δὲ πορφυρωείδες, and so Pliny flore candido, calyce purpureo (cf. Ecl. 5. 38 purpureo narcisso). 'Hence', Martyn writes, 'we may be sure that some species of our daffodil is the narcissus of the ancients, and probably the narcissus albus circulo purpureo'. To the objection that daffodils are spring flowers, he replies that they grow at Constantinople and in Asia Minor in December.
NOTES.

123. flexi ... acanthi] 'the stalk of the twining acanthus'. The plant seems to be acanthus spinosus, 'bear's-foot' or 'brank-ursine', so called from the resemblance of its leaf to a bear's claw. The sculptor Callimachus is said to have conceived the design of the capital of a Corinthian column from its leaves growing over a flower-pot, and it was commonly used in artistic decoration, cf. Theoc. 1. 55 παντὰ ἀμφὶ δὲ πασὶ περιπετατὰς υγρὸς ἄκανθος, where υγρὸς = flexus.

124. pallentes hederas] So Ecl. 3. 38 hederā pallente; 7. 38 hederā alba. The ancient writers all speak of a 'white ivy' bearing a white fruit, but Martyn cannot identify it. Variegated ivies are often strongly marked with white having some leaves wholly of that colour. amantes ...: cf. G. 2. 112.

125. Oebaliae] Oebalus was a king of Sparta, and so Oebalia is used = Laconia, but here, as the mention of the Galesus, a river of Calabria, shows, = Tarentum which was founded by Phalanthus, a Spartan (cf. Hor. Od. 2. 6. 12 seq., where he also refers to the great charm and richness of the district).

126. niger] In artistic contrast with flaventia; but the Galesus is actually deep and dark.

127. Corycium] Corycus was a city in Cilicia with a famous cave (Κωρύκιον ἄντρον) in the mountains close to it. Servius says that the old man was one of the Cilicians settled in Calabria by Pompey after his defeat of the Cilician pirates (b.c. 67); in any case the Cilicians were expert gardeners, growing saffron under glass, Mart. 8. 14. relicti: 'abandoned' or 'not appropriated' (cf. Cic. Agr. 1. I hanc silvam in relictis possessionibus, an in censorum pascuis inuenistis?) as what follows shows. It was neither good corn land (fertilis iuvencis) nor pasture land (nec pecori o. s.) nor fit for vines (nec c. B.), and yet (tamen 130) this old man's skill worked wonders on it.

128. illa] emphatic, drawing marked attention to the poorness of the land. iuvencis: clearly dat. like pecori and Baccho; it yielded nothing to the steers which ploughed it.

129. seges] of the 'land', 'soil', itself.

130. rarum ... in dumis] 'here and there amid the bushes'; an exaggerated expression, as though there were only a few patches of soil among the thorns, etc., which grew rank all over.
131. verbenas] An unknown herb or shrub specially used in sacred rites (Ecli. 8. 65; Hor. Od. 1. 19. 14; Liv. 1. 24). premens: ‘planting’; cf. G. 2. 346. vescum: This curious word certainly means ‘small’; cf. Ov. Fast. 3. 446 vescaque parva vocant; Pliny N. H. 7. 81 corpore vesco sed eximiis viribus; Lucr. 1. 326 vesco sale sara peresa, ‘fine spray’; G. 3. 175 vescas salicis frondes. Conington here refers it to the smallness of the poppy’s seeds, but perhaps it means ‘slender’. Servius says vescum quo vescimur referring to the fact that seeds of the white poppy were made into a dish with honey for dessert, but this, like the view of Gellius (16. 5. 6), that it is from ve-esca = ‘eating much’ or ‘eating little’ seems merely an attempt to find an etymology for an obscure word.

132. regum ...] ‘matched the wealth of kings by his spirit’, Conington. He was poor, but by his pluck managed to live like a prince, the produce of his toil enabling him to ‘burden his board with unboought banquets.’ Others give animis, ‘in imagination’; but (1) this would require animo, and (2) he does not merely imagine himself a prince, but actually feasts like one.

134. primus ... carpere] ‘(he was) the first to pluck’, cf. 140 primus abundare; the inf. is variously called Prolative, because it extends, or Epexegetic, because it fully explains (ἐπεξηγεῖταί) the meaning of the adj. A man may be ‘first’ in many ways, but when you say ‘first to pluck’ you make clear in what way. Cf. 84 obnixi non cedere; 470 nescia mansuescere. Others make carpere and abundare historic inf.

137. ille ...] ‘he was already gathering (cf. Prop. 4. 13. 9 violas tondere manu) blossoms of the soft hyacinth.’ comam: the whole growth, including both flowers and leaves; cf. Col. 10. 277 tellurisque comam. For the ‘hyacinth’, cf. 183 n. For the scansion tondebūt hyacinthi, cf. 453 n. Virgil has hyacinthus five times at the end of a line, hymenaei ten times, and so too cuparissus, elephanto, terebintho.

138. aestatem] ‘taunting summer for its lateness and the zephyrs for their delay’; seram and morantes are predicative. The Romans grew roses and lilies in greenhouses (Mart. 4. 22. 5) under specularia, and also saffron (Gilicum pomaria Mart. 8. 14. 1), and possibly Virgil thinks of this old man as so forcing early flowers, but as in the next lines these early flowers are fed on by bees (cf. ergo), it is more likely that he merely describes him as taking advantage of the favourable climate of Tarentum to have flowers in bloom when it was still winter in most places.

139. apibus fetis] inconsistent with 198 seq.

140. spumantia] the honey when taken from the combs was left standing in earthenware vessels open to the air for a few days ‘until fermentation ceased’ (dum musteus fructus defervescat), the scum being frequently removed, Col. 9. 15. cogere: ‘gather’, cf. 231. pressis: cf. 101 n.

141. tiliae] ‘limes’ when in flower are great favourites with bees. The ‘pine’ is also mentioned as acceptable to them in 112, possibly for its resinous exudations, but more probably for the sake of the clouds of pollen-dust produced by the ripe male cones.

142. quotque ...] ‘and as many as were the fruits with which in early flower the productive tree had dressed itself, so many ripe in autumn it retained’: i.e. each blossom set and came to maturity. Of course when a tree is in flower there can be no fruits (poma), so that pomis can only refer to the promise of fruit which each blossom holds. For induerat cf. G. 1. 187 *cum se nux plurima silvis | induct in florem, ‘shall don its robe of blossom’. matura: sc. poma, though Conington refers it to arbos.

144. in versum distulit] ‘planted out into a row’. seras, eduram, iam pruna ferentes, iam min. umbras are all emphatic. His skill was shown by his moving trees when no one else could; he could do so when owing to their age it seemed too late, when the wood was no longer young but ‘very hard’, etc.

145. spinos] ‘I have translated spinos in this place ‘thorns’, because the plum is a thorny tree; and because our wild sort, which bears the sloes, is called ‘the black-thorn’, prunus spinosa:’ Martyn.

146. ministrantem ...] The plane-tree (πλάτανος, from *πλατύς ‘broad’) was frequently planted in gardens because of the grateful shade afforded by its broad leaves; cf. Hor. Od. 2. 11. 13; Ov. Met. 10. 95 genialis platanus; Plat. Phaedr. 229 A. 230 B.
147. spatiis ... 'debarred (i.e. from doing so) by scanty space'; cf. Aen. 5. 203 spatio in quo. He has no room to expatiate on the subject.

148. aliis] The task was undertaken by Columella, the tenth Book of whose treatise De Re Rustica is entitled de cultu hortorum and written in hexameters ut poetici numeris explerem Georgici carminis omissas partes, quas tamen et ipse Vergilius significaverat posteris se memorandas relinquere.

149-218. The remarkable instincts of bees (which are described 153-218) were given them in payment for their services to the infant Jupiter.

149. naturas] 'qualities', 'instincts'.

150. addidit] The bees are described as not originally possessing their exceptional instincts, but as receiving them in addition to their previous ordinary ones as the 'pay for which' (pro qua mercede) they agreed to feed Jupiter. The legend was that Cronos (Saturn) devoured his children because he knew that one of them was to depose him, but that his mother hid Jupiter in a cave of Mt. Dicte in Crete, and the Curetes (see Vocab.) drowned his cries by clashing their cymbals (Lucr. 2. 633 seq.; Ov. Fast. 4. 207), while the bees, attracted by the sound (cf. line 64), provided the infant with honey.

153-178. Bees alone of living creatures have a social organization under which children, houses, and goods are held in common, and all in their various offices labour to lay up the stores which are to support the whole community through the winter; some collecting food, some building, others training the young, packing honey, or keeping guard at the gates. The stir and bustle is like that in the workshops of the Cyclopes.

The 'division of labour' is always the mark of an advanced social life, and its existence among bees is noted by Aristotle (H. A. 9. 40; see Con.); but the best illustration of Virgil and the best commentary on him is Shak. Henry V. 1. 2. 183

"Therefore doth heaven divide
The state of man in divers functions,
Setting endeavour in continual motion;
To which is fixed, as an aim or butt,
Obedience: for so work the honey-bees,
Creatures that by a rule in nature teach
The act of order to a peopled kingdom."
They have a king and officers of sorts;
Where some, like magistrates, correct at home,
Others, like merchants, venture trade abroad,
Others, like soldiers, armed in their stings
Make boot upon the summer's velvet buds,
Which pillage they with merry march bring home
To the tent-royal of their emperor;
Who, buried in his majesty, surveys
The singing masons building roofs of gold,
The civil citizens kneading up the honey,
The poor mechanic porters crowding in Their heavy burdens at his narrow gate,
Delivering o'er to executors pale
The lazy yawning drone”.

153. solae] ‘The ancients knew very little of the other social insects—wasps, hornets, ants’: Sidgwick. communes natos: as in the ideal Republic of Plato (457 d) καὶ τῶν παιδῶν αὐτῶν κοινῶν. consortia tecta urbis habent: lit. ‘they possess the dwellings of their city in partnership’; consors is strictly one who shares any property (sors) with another, a co-heir, a partner, but is here used of the property thus held in partnership (cf. Prop. 1. 21. 1 consortem casum), and consortia is exactly parallel to communes. Conington strangely gives ‘dwellings united into a city’, making urbis the emphatic word.

154. agitant aevum] a heroic phrase; cf. Aen. 10. 235 et dedit esse deas aevumque agitare sub undis; Enn. 10. (353) qui tum vivebant homines aevumque agitabant; ib. (Cic. Tusc. 1. 12. 28) Romulus in caelo cum dis agit aevum. For agito = ago in the sense of ‘passing’ time; cf. G. 2. 527 dies agitatis festos.

155. certos ...] Cf. I. 43.

157. in medium ...] ‘garner their gains into a common store’. Virgil is fond of using neuter adjectives as substantives, especially with a preposition. So here in medium = εἰς τὸ κοινὸν and quaesita = ‘gains’; cf. 6 in tenui ‘on a trivial theme’; 25. 157 in medium; 126 culta ‘tilled lands; 239 futuro ‘the future’; 303 in clanco. In Latin prose such words as bonum, honestum, pulchrum, utile are continually used instead of abstract substantives.
158. victu] dat.; here not 'food' but 'the collecting of food', as the next words show. foedere . . .: 'by fixed covenant are busied in the fields'. foedus is the formal 'covenant' according to which they apportion their duties among themselves.

159. saepta domorum] 'their close-fenced dwellings'; cf. Aen. 11. 882 tuta domorum; 1. 422 strata viarum; 2. 332 angusta viarum; 725 opaca locorum.

160. Narcissi . . . gluten] The substance thus described by hendiadys is 'propolis', which is used for attaching the combs to the roof from which they hang down (cf. suspendunt), see 39 n. For the narcissus = a daffodil, cf. 122 n., and for N. lacrimam Milton Lycidas 150 'And daffodillies fill their cups with tears', but Virgil's phrase also suggests the story of Narcissus, see Vocab. s.v.

162. ceras] The same as favis, the 'combs' being made of 'wax'.

aliae . . .] Cf. Milton Par. Lost i. 768,

"As bees,
In spring time, when the sun with Taurus rides,
Pour forth their populous youth about the hives
In clusters; they among fresh dews and flowers
Fly to and fro, or on the smoothed plank,
The suburb of their straw-built citadel,
New rubbed with balm, expatiate and confer
Their state affairs".

The passage is repeated Aen. 1. 430 seq.

164. stipant] 'pack close', the process being further described in the words et . . . cellas, where the honey is called nectar just as we speak of any choice drink as 'nectar', cf. Ecl. 5. 71.

165. sunt, quibus . . .] 'to some wardership at the gates has fallen as their lot (sorti dat., cf. curae, 113; P. Sch. Gr. III. § 129; Roby 482 a) and according to their order they . . . or . . . or . . .' In line 165 the large division of those who 'keep ward' at the gates is mentioned, sunt quibus being parallel to aliae, pars, aliae, aliae, and then in 166–168 the subdivisions of these warders are described; sors indicates the general work of the whole division and in vicem the particular portions of it which each subdivision takes, cf. Aen. 9. 174
omnis per muros legio sortita periculum | excubat exercetque rices, quod enique tuendum est. Many say that sorti is an old abl. (cf. ruri, vesperi, parti, etc. sorti victus Plaut. Cas. 2. 7. 6) and then perplex themselves by showing that Roman sentinels were not appointed 'by lot.'

For 'sentinel-bees' see Figuier, The Insect-World, p. 347:
There are always at the entrance of every hive three or four bees, which have nothing else to do but to guard the door, to keep a watch over incomers and outgoers, and to prevent an enemy or intruder from slipping into the community'.

166. spectulantur] A military term, cf. custodia, agmine facto. aquas et ...: i.e. the clouds which threaten rain (aqua caelestis Hor. Od. 3. 10. 19); Arist. H. A. 9. 40 προγινωσκουσι δὲ καὶ χειμώνα καὶ οὐδὲρ αἱ μελιτται.

167. aut onera ...] 'purveyors, in a hurry to be at work again, stop at the entrance to the hive, where other bees unload them of their burden'; Figuier p. 320.

168. ignavum ...] 'drive the drones, an idle throng, from the enclosure.' For the peculiar order ignavum fucos pecus cf. 246 dirum tineae genus; Ecl. 3. 3 inflix o semper, oves, pecus. 'The drones, i.e. the males, when the swarming season is over (about July), are massacred by the working-bees, being unable to defend themselves as they have no stings'; Figuier p. 342. But Varro 3. 16. 8 refers to their 'expulsion', a se eiciunt fucos, quod hi neque adiuvant et mel consumunt.

169. fervet ...] Summing up the whole description. For ferveo of busy bustle cf. Aen. 4. 407 opere omnis semita ferveret (of ants), and 409 litora ferrere (of the activity of the followers of Aeneas). Here the word, = 'is aglow', leads up to the comparison with a smithy.

170. The simile which follows has been criticised as exaggerated, but Virgil himself marks the comparison as half-humorous in line 176. He would thoroughly have enjoyed reading the graver commentators on some of his work. lentis ... massis: i.e. the lumps of heated and malleable metal with which the thunderbolts are forged; lentus describes what is tough and also yielding.

171. properant] 'make haste to forge'.

172. stridentia] 'hissing'.
173. lacu] heroic for the blacksmith’s trough. inpositis incudibus: not of the ἀκμῶν placed on the ἀκμόθετον (‘anvil-block’), which would be forced, but of the weight of the anvils and blocks together, beneath which Aetna groans.

174. Accommodation of sound to sense.

175. in numerum] ‘to a measure’, so that their blows fall rhythmically; cf. Ecl. 6. 27 in numerum Faunosque ferasque videres | ludere. Any one who has watched strikers or paviors will know that they do and must keep time.

177. Cecropias] to add dignity. The honey of Hymettus was famous. amor habendi: ‘passion for gain’; Aen. 8. 327.

178-190. The aged busy themselves within doors, the young abroad. All day they work, and in the evening refresh themselves, buzz awhile about the entrances, and then sleep the sound sleep of the weary. This section forms a beautiful contrast with the feverish activity described in the preceding one.

179. munire] ‘to build’, as though they were moenia. daedala: a favourite word with Lucretius (Munro on 1. 7) = δαίδαλος from δαίδαλλο, ‘to fashion cunningly’, but there is also a reference to Daedalus who built the Labyrinth in Crete, which the network of cells resembles.

180. multa nocte] ‘late at night’; cf. Cic. ad Q. 2. 9. 2; Caes. B. G. 1. 22 multo denique die.

181. crura ...] ‘their thighs laden with thyme’. Bees carry pollen in balls in a peculiar hollow of their hind legs; Figuier, pp. 317, 318. crura, acc. of respect.

183. tiliam] cf. line 141; Conington says, ‘called pinguem from the gluten on its leaves’. ferrugineos: this adjective from ferrugo ‘iron rust’ (used of the lurid light of the eclipsed sun G. 1. 467), is applied to Charon’s bark Aen. 6. 303, but its force here must depend on a knowledge of what the ‘hyacinth’ is. The Greek word (which appears in Latin as raceminum) is the name of a beautiful youth accidentally killed by Apollo, from whose blood the flower is supposed to have sprung. It bore certain marks on its petals which were sometimes read as Τ, the first letter of the youth’s name, or ΑΙ, ΑΙ ‘alas’.
Both Virgil (Ecl. 10. 39 et nigrae violae sunt et vaccinia nigra) and Theocritus (10. 28 καὶ τὸ ἱον μέλαν ἔπτι, καὶ ἀ γραπτὰ ύάκινθος) call it ‘black’, while in Ecl. 3. 63 it is square rubens hyacinthus, and Ovid calls it Tyrio nitentior. ostr. Hence Martyn identifies it with the ‘Martagon’ lily, which is of a deep blood colour with curious markings on the petals (see illustration in his edition).

187. tum corpora curant] A regular phrase = ‘refresh themselves’; cf. Aen. 3. 511. It includes not merely eating but bathing, etc.

188. mussantque...] Notice this beautiful phrase descriptive equally of the bees and of an evening gossip on the doorstep. Aristotle says that when they return in an evening ὥρυρποῦσι τὸ πρῶτον until the signal is given for repose (ἐὼς ἂν μία περιπετομένη βοηθήσῃ, ὃσπερ σημαλνουσα καθεύδειν· εἶτα ἔξαπίνης σωπῶσιν), and so Pliny, N. H. 11. 10.

189. siletur...] ‘there is silence into the night’, ‘silence is prolonged into the night’.

190. suus] ‘their own slumber’, ‘well-won slumber’. The word refers to artus (cf. 22 n.): the ‘weary limbs’ have ‘earned a night’s repose,’ it is theirs, they need it.

191-196. When rain or wind threatens they do not venture on any but brief flights, sometimes carrying with them tiny stones as ballast.

193. circum] i.e. close around the hive. tutae, submoenibus, aquantur, and excitus (‘sallies’) all suggest the idea of soldiers in a beleaguered town.

194. et saepe...] ‘and often, as unstable barks on tossing waves (take) ballast, they upheave tiny stones ...’. Perhaps there is some reference to the mason-bee. Note the sense of effort indicated by the spondaic tollunt followed by a pause.

197-209. Bees do not marry or produce offspring, but the females gather their young from flowers, and thus supply the hive with a king and tiny citizens, while they continually renew his palace and wax-built realm, often losing their lives in their devotion to bringing home stores of honey. Therefore (i.e. in consequence of this devotion in thus continually renewing the race and realm), though each bee’s life is brief, the race remains imperishable.

Many would transpose lines 203–205, and place them after 196; but, as Conington remarks, 'the general integrity of Virgil's text is quite beyond suspicion', and the connection of thought seems to be that indicated in the summary. Virgil points out that though the female bees do not supply the state with citizens as Roman matrons did, still the maintenance of the state was due to their continued care and self-sacrifice.

197. illum] 'this', pointing forward to quod; adeo emphasizes it, 'this of all conceivable customs', 'this strange custom'. For adeo thus appended to a single word which it emphasizes, cf. Ecl. 4. 11; G. 1. 11 tuque adeo; Ecl. 9. 59 hinc adeo 'from just here'; G. 1. 94 multum adeo 'very much'.

198. quod ...] 'that they neither indulge in marriage nor idly enervate their bodies in love or bring forth young with travail'.

200. ipsae] 'by themselves', i.e. without the male. The same account is given, among others, by Aristotle. As a matter of fact, the queen bee is fertilized from a drone, and then lays eggs at the rate of at least two hundred a day, which are then taken in charge by some of the working bees. In five days the larvae are developed, spin for themselves a cocoon, and are transformed into pupae, from which the perfect insect is hatched in seven or eight days.

201. Quirites; aulas; cerea regna] Note the human character given to the bees.

204. ultroque ...] 'and voluntarily laid down life beneath their burden'; the bees bringing home honey are compared to soldiers who march (G. 3. 346 acer Romanus in armis/injusto sub fasce viam cum carpit) until they drop dead. Ultro, connected with ultra, often describes an act which is purely voluntary, which goes beyond anything which might reasonably have been expected. You might expect a bee to give up its burden to save its life, but it will not. Cf. 265 n.

206. ergo] see summary. ipsas: i.e. the individual bees as contrasted with the race; 'the limit of his narrow span awaits' the individual, 'yet the race remains imperishable'. Virgil speaks of the bees, but is thinking of the Romans who, as Lincoln said of the dead at Gettysburg, "gave their lives that the nation might live".
207. excipiat] ‘awaits’; excipere is ‘to receive from another’ or ‘in turn’, and then is often = ‘wait to receive’ (especially of hunters waiting for game to be driven out of cover). plus septima: ‘more than the seventh’; for quam omitted, cf. Ecl. 3. 105 tres ... non amplius ulnas; Aen. 1. 683 noctem non amplius unam. It seems that, though queens may live for several seasons, yet that ordinary bees when they are busy and work abundant do not live for more than six or seven weeks, as has been shown by the introduction of a Ligurian queen into a hive of common black bees.

209. stat fortuna domus] The motto of Harrow. stat: the simple sto is used in preference to any of its compounds to express immovable fixity: the smallness of the word is its strength; cf. Hor. Od. 3. 3. 42 stet Capitolium. fortuna: a clear reference to the fortuna populi Romani; cf. Plut. de fortuna Romanorum c. 4; Hor. Od. 1. 35. The ‘fortune’ of the commonwealth of bees is as steadfast as that of Rome.

210-218. No oriental despot is so reverenced as their king. While he is safe all is unity, if he is lost all is anarchy; they show him every mark of honour, and die for him in battle.

210. Aegyptos] All eastern monarchies were to the Romans, as to the Greeks, types of absolute despotism.

211. Lydia] The reference is, as ingens shows, to the empire of Croesus (560-546 B.C.), which extended from the Aegean to the Halys. Parthorum: for prostration before their monarchs, cf. Mart. 10. 72. 5 ad Parthos procul ite pileatos | et turpes humilesque supplicesque | pictorum sola basiate regum. Medus: the Hydaspes (Jelum) is in fact a tributary of the Indus.

213. rupere; diripuere; solvere] the perfects express rapidity (cf. G. 2. 80 nec longum tempus, et ingens|exiiit ad caelum ramis felicibus arbos); the moment he is lost they destroy everything. On the loss of a queen, according to Figuier, the bees ‘without losing time in useless regrets, apply themselves to repair their loss’ which they do by selecting a larva, and feeding it on ‘royal’ food; others, however, speak of there being great confusion for some days.

214. crates favorum] ‘their trellised combs’.

216. stipant] ‘attend’; stipatores is regularly used for the attendants’ or ‘retinue’ of royal personages.
217. attollunt umeris] Aristotle (H. A. 9. 40) says that this is done 'when he cannot fly', Pliny when he is 'weary,' and so too Varro. Cerda refers to Roman soldiers taking up a commander on the shields, and proclaiming him emperor, see Suet. Otho. c. 6.

218. pulchramque .. ] 'and seek through wounds a glorious death'; the blows rain upon them as they rush on, and so they are said to rush per vulnera.

219-227. From these signs some assert that bees exhibit the possession of that divine intelligence and ethereal principle which, they say, animates and pervades the universe, each individual life being derived from it and at death not dying but returning to it into heaven.

The aether, according to many ancient philosophers, was a subtle and fiery element which, as being lighter than 'The cumbrous elements, earth, flood, air, fire', rises above them all, and so surrounds the universe and feeds the heavenly bodies. It is regarded as the source of life throughout the universe (and so it is 'the soul of the universe' anima mundi, cf. line 221), and the individual life is derived from it (line 224) and goes back to it (line 225), while in its fullest development it creates not only sense but intelligence (mens; in Stoic language πνεῦμα νοερὸν καὶ πνεύματος). See G. 1. 415; Aen. 6. 724 seq.; Milton, P. L. 3. 715-723. Apparently Virgil means that the intelligence of bees is quoted as an indication that this divine and intelligent force is to be found elsewhere than in mankind, and so may be inferred to permeate all things.

220. partem divinae mentis] So Horace, S. 2. 2. 79 calls the human soul divinae particulam aurae. haustus aetherios: 'draughts of ether'; the way in which they receive the ethereal essence is expressed by the image of 'drinking' it. By a similar image in Gen. ii. 7, life is communicated to man by being 'breathed into his nostrils'.

221. deum ...] 'for that the Deity pervades all earth and the expanse of sea and the heights of heaven; and thence (i.e. from this pervading spirit) flocks ..., each creature at birth derives the subtle essence of life, yea and thither all things are thereafter restored and return ...'.

222. terrasquē] Virgil is fond of thus lengthening que before a double consonant in imitation of Homer’s lengthening of τε as in Λάμπτον τε Κλήτων τε, Προδοθήμωρ τε Κλήτως τε: G. 1. 153 lappaque tribulique, 164 tribulaque traheaeque.

223. Note the double contrast in pecudes)(armenta and vinos)(ferarum.

224. tenues] Because of the extreme subtlety of this vital principle, which Virgil regards as somehow possessing substance, but so refined as to be almost unsubstantial. In this he follows Lucretius, who regards the soul as tenuis aura (De Rer. Nat. 3. 232) than which there is nothing tenuius.

225. reddi, resoluta, referri] assonance emphasizing the idea that death is not death, but a mere returning of the spirit to its original home. resoluta: ‘broken up’ not destroyed, the body separating into its constituent elements, the soul ‘winging its way alive’ back to heaven. Cf. Eccl. xii. 7.

226. sideris in numerum] ‘to join the starry host’, but the use of sideris for siderum is remarkable. Compare, however, the use of glandis 81 = ‘acorns’, and Wagner thinks that Virgil is imitating Lucr. 1. 437 corporis anget bill numerum; cf. too Ov. Tr. 2. 567, inter tot scripti milia nostri; Eur. Beller. 25 λόγχης ἀριθμῶς πλείων κρατούμεναι. Others give in modum sideris ‘after the fashion of a star’; Kennedy ‘into the cluster of a constellation’.

227-238. When you take the honey, as you may do in spring and autumn, rinse your mouth and use smoke (to drive away the bees), as when angered they sting.

228. angustam: 230. ora fove] It is impossible to decide between this reading and the alternative angustam ... ore fave. The latter suits the stately word thesauris, but is perhaps somewhat too exaggerated: Benoist well explains it, ‘Pour approcher de la demeure auguste des abeilles il faut s’être purifié et garder le silence’ (cf. Aen. 5. 71).

229. relines] The regular word for opening a wine-jar by breaking the seal: here of opening the hive, and unfastening the combs by breaking the wax which attaches them to the roof.
230. ora fove] 'rinse thy mouth': cf. G. 2. 135 ora foveat, and for this use of foveo line 43 n. Bees are very sensitive to certain smells, and Columella (9. 41) recommends that any one, before taking honey, should not only bathe but abstain from any strong-smelling food such as onions.

fumosque ...] 'and with thy hand direct in front pursuing smoke'. The object of the smoke is stated by Columella (9. 15), who gives an elaborate description of a fumigator, to be to drive away the bees (cf. sequaces) and not to stupefy them.

231. bis ...] 'twice do they (the bee-keepers) gather in the heavy yield': for fetus of any 'produce', cf. G. 2. 442 silvae ... dant alios aliae fetus where it is applied to timber, and Ov. Fast. 1. 693 triticeos fetus. Some make the bees the nom. to coquent, but the idea of the bees first harvesting the honey and then the bee-keepers doing so would present a harsh contrast. messis: cf. Columella 9. 15. 1 haec mellis vindemia.

232. Taýgete] One of the Pleiades, which rise early in May and set in November. The star is here personified as a goddess, and so is said to 'display her comely (cf. G. 2. 392 caput honestum of Bacchus) face', and to 'spurn with her foot the despised streams of Oceanus' as she leaps into the air.

233. Oceani amnes] In Homer Ωκέάνοι ῥοᾶς. Note the joyous vigour of this line, and contrast the dull depression of 235.

234. sidus ...] The Pleiades set just before the rainy season when the sun enters Pisces; Virgil graphically represents Taýgete as seeking to fly from so gloomy a constellation.

236-9. Many editors place these lines after 231, where they certainly follow more naturally. Gepp quotes from Sotheby a fine rendering:

"The injured swarms with rage insatiate glow,
Barb every shaft and poison every blow;
Deem life itself to vengeance well resigned—
Die on the wound, and leave their stings behind."

236. venenum ...] The sting of a bee is a finely pointed tubular instrument which pours poison into the wound; the surface is serrated so that it cannot be withdrawn but is torn out of the body, dragging with it some of the intestines and so causing death.
239-250. Should you hesitate about taking the honey, yet remember to fumigate them and to cut out empty combs which shelter insects; (and do not be too timorous about taking the honey, for) the more you take from them the more eagerly will they endeavour to make up the loss.

239. duram hiemem] ‘the cruel winter’, against which, if you take the honey, they will, you feel, be without protection, so that you ‘are tender to their future’.

241. suffire thymo] i.e. for purification and to get rid of vermin.

242. quis dubitet] ‘who would hesitate’? The answer is —No one; ‘for often (if this is neglected) an unnoticed newt has consumed the combs’, etc.

243. stellio et] Spondee, i being treated as consonantal, cf. 38 n. et lucifugis...: ‘and chambers full of skulking beetles (have consumed the combs)’. The whole phrase (=swarms of beetles) being parallel to stellio and fucus 244, and forming part of the subject of adedit. Others supply sunt after congesta, but this is very awkward, as the words then interrupt the construction of adedit stellio, which is resumed in line 244. If the phrase lucifugis...blattis cannot be tolerated as a nominative, then it is best to put a semicolon after blattis and remove the one after fucus.

244. inmunis] ἀδιψόβολος ‘uncontributing’; the drone sits at a feast which others furnish ‘without paying his shot’. Cf. Hor. Od. 4. 12. 23 non ego te meis inmunem meditor tinguere poculis, where Horace inviting a guest tells him that he must contribute his share, and such ‘club’ dinners were common both with the Greeks and Romans, see σψβολή in L. and S., and asymbolus, Ter. Ph. 2. 2. 25. Conington gives ‘without performing his munus of labour’.

245. inparibus] ‘unequal’, i.e. far superior to the weapons of the bees.

246. invisa Minervae...] ‘hateful to Minerva’ as the goddess of industry, whereas the spider’s web symbolizes domestic neglect, and also because Arachne (ἀράχνη = aranea) was described as a Lydian maiden who irritated Minerva by the beauty of her weaving and was changed into a spider.

248. acrius] exactly = ‘more eagerly’; acer = French aigre ‘eager’. “This loss of their honey ... seems to induce the bees to work their hardest to replace their stores”; Enc. Brit.
249. incumbent ...] ‘will press on to repair the ruins of their fallen race’. Incumbent, exactly like our ‘put their shoulder to the wheel to ...’; for inf. after it cf. line 10 n.

250. foros] (1) The gangway of a ship; (2) a row of seats in a theatre, and so here a row of cells. floribus = anything got from flowers (cf. 38), here clearly wax (not ‘pollen’, as Conington gives).

251–270. If your bees sicken—and you will detect it at once by change of colour and appearance, the frequency of deaths, general inactivity, and a dull buzzing—then you must burn galbanum and tempt them with honey mixed with gall-nuts, wine-syrup, etc.

251. casus nostros] i.e. human ills. The extremely rare rhythm apibus | quoque (cf. G.1.80) seems to throw a melancholy emphasis on apibus. The apodosis to si ... languebunt is l. 264 hic iam suadebo, but in 254–263 Virgil interrupts the construction with a list of symptoms.

253. quod iam ...] ‘which when it happens’; so below 264 hic iam ‘then when this happens’.

254. continuo est aegris] continuo goes with aegris, ‘as soon as they begin to sicken they change colour’; then follows a ‘ragged leanness of aspect’; then death. For this force of continuo, cf. G. 1. 169 continuo in silvis; 356 continuo ventis surgentibus ‘as soon as the winds begin to rise’. horrida describes the rough, ragged look of the hair on their bodies; cf. Varro 3. 16 minus valentium signa, si sunt pilosae et horridae.

255. luce carentum] a stately phrase for the dead, found in Lucr. 4. 35.

257. aut illae] ‘or else observe’. This pleonastic use of ille to draw marked attention to the subject is common, cf. 128; G. 3. 217; 501 incertus ibidem | sudor, et ille quidem morituris frigidus, ‘an intermittent sweat and, observe, at the approach of death cold’. pedibus ...: ‘they hang twined in a cluster by their feet’; cf. Aen. 7. 66 pedibus per mutua nexis ... pependit (of a swarm). Some give ‘with their feet drawn up’; but, if so, what force has pendent?

259. contracto] ‘pinched’; the adj. is applied to cold itself though it strictly describes its effect.
NOTES.

260. tractimque ...] 'and there is a long-drawn buzzing'. Tractim, lit. 'with drawing out', 'in drawling fashion'; cf. cursim 'with running', 'hurriedly'; pedetemptim, 'with feeling the way,' 'cautiously', etc.

261. ut quondam] 'as often', 'as at times'; quondam is used in introducing a comparison with something which happens frequently; cf. G. 3. 99 ut quondam in stipulis ... ignis | incassum furit. inmurmurat: 'rustles amidst'. For the south wind as cold cf. G. 3. 279. The three comparisons are adapted from Il. 14. 394 seq.

262. ut ...] 'as the fretful sea, when the surge flows back'. Stridit describes a hard sibilant sound heard when a wave has broken and falls back; cf. Tennyson's "I heard the shingle grinding in the surge". For the form stridère cf. 556 n.

263. aestuat] 'seethes'; as in the previous two comparisons the sound suggested is sibilant—such as you often hear from a gas-burner.

264. galbaneos ...] Galbanum was also used (G. 3. 415) to get rid of snakes by its strong smell (nidor) when burned. suadebo: 'I shall advise', i.e. when such a case occurs to you; cf. proderit 267. The use of the future seems quite distinct from that of the didactic 'thou shalt' with the 2nd person, for which see mittes 545, mactabis, revises 546.

265. ultro] i.e. do not wait for the bees to show any desire for food, but go further, and urge them to take it; cf. 204 n.

266. fessas] i.e. sick, cf. Hor. C. S. 63 qui salutari levat arte fessos.

267. tunsum gallae saporem] 'the pounded oak-gall’s flavour'. A good instance of what is called Hypallage (transference of epithet); cf. Aen. 8. 526 Tyrrhenusque tubae clangor ‘the Tyrrhene trumpet’s bray’: in all such cases the phrase must be closely knit together. Oak-galls are an astringent, and bees suffer much from dysentery.

268. igni ...] 'wine-syrup (made) rich with much boiling', i.e. by evaporating much of the water, cf. G. 1. 295.

269. Psithia ...] From G. 2. 93 (et passo Psithia utilior) it is clear that Virgil refers to passum, wine made from dried grapes, and not to actual dried grapes.
56

VERG. GEORG. IV.

270. Cecropium] Cecrops was a king of Attica, in which was Mt. Hymettus famous for its thyme, cf. 177. grave olentia: 'strong-smelling'. The phrase is sometimes written as one word, but in any case grave is really a cognate acc. used adverbially, 'that smells with a strong (smell)'; cf. 122 sera comantem 'that flowers with late (flowers)', 'late-flowering'. centaurea: so called because the centaur Chiron, who was famous for healing, used it.

271-280. There is too a plant called 'amellus', which has a flower with a golden centre and violet petals; this should be boiled in rich wine and given to them.

271. amello] Martyn identifies this with the Aster Atticus or purple Italian starwort, which is common in Italy and therefore very easy to be found (facilis quaerentibus herba). 'The root,' he adds, 'consists of a great bunch of fibres (uno de caespite) and caespes in 273 does not signify the earth or turf, but radix caespitosa, a root whose fibres are thickly matted together. From this root arise a vast number of stalks (ingentem silvam, cf. G. 1. 76).... The flower is of that sort which botanists call a radiated discous flower; the disk is yellow and the ray purple.'

274. ipse] i.e. the centre as opposed to the 'petals' (foliis). For this use of folia cf. Ovid's description of the narcissus, Met. 3. 509 croceum pro corpore florem | inveniunt, foliis medium cingentibus albis.

275. violae ...] 'a purple sheen (54 n.) gleams beneath dark violet.'

276. saepe ...] 'often are the altars of the gods adorned with woven chaplets (of it)'; the line adds another means of identifying the plant, viz. by its frequent use to decorate altars.

277. tonsis] Either most simply 'when the hay has been cut', ('It flowers in autumn and at the time of hay-harvest is not yet out of the ground' Deuticke), or 'the shepherds gather it in the valleys where their flocks are browsing' (cf. G. 1. 15 tondent dumeta iurenci).

278. Mellae] a river in Gallia Transpadana which flows by Brixia: 'a domestic touch' (Conington).

279. odorato] 'scented', 'fragrant'; 'with bouquet', as we say, and therefore good.
281-294. In case any one loses his whole stock of bees, I will now relate at length the memorable discovery of Aristaeus for obtaining a new stock as it is practised throughout Egypt.

281. si ... defecerit, nec ... habebit] Conington well points out that the difference of tense indicates a difference of time, just as in speaking of present time we might say proles eum defecit, nec habet—, 'if his breed shall have failed him, and he shall (then) be ignorant whence ...'.

283. et] 'also', i.e. in addition to my previous precepts. Arcadii magistri: Aristaeus, cf. 317. He was a great authority on agriculture (cf. G. 1. 14) and especially on bees, but his connection with Arcadia is unknown.

284. quoque ...] 'and how often ere now when cattle have been slaughtered the putrifying blood has produced bees'. That bees will settle in a decaying carcase is well known (cf. the story of Samson, Judges xiv. 8 "and behold, there was a swarmin of bees and honey in the carcase of the lion"), and they were commonly supposed to be produced by the putrefaction, especially from oxen, cf. Varro de R. R. 2. 5 ex hoc (bove) putrefacto nasci dulcissimas apes, mellis matres, a quo eas Graeci βούναρας απελλάντ; so too βυνας is used of them.

285. altius] 'more deeply', i.e. as explained in the next line, 'retracing it from its source'.

287. nam qua ...] This description of Egypt clearly marks its boundaries (1) on the W. for Canopus is its most westerly town, (2) on the E., cf. vicinia Persidis, and (3) on the S. amnis devexus ab Indis, 293. Others say that the delta only is referred to, and make line 291 mark its S. point, but lines 291-2 clearly refers to the rest of Egypt. The whole passage is diffuse, and lines 291-3 vary in order in mss., but there is no reason to suspect any of them, for these 'learned' descriptions were popular in antiquity (cf. the learned list of rivers 367 seq.) and are not out of place in a didactic poem. Pellaei: 'Macedonian', because Alexandria close by was built by Alexander, and also because Egypt after his death passed under the Macedonian Ptolemies. fortunata: because of the richness of the soil.

289. pictis ... phaselis] The phaselus (φάσηλος) is a long skiff shaped like a French bean. Juvenal (15. 127) describes these boats as made of earthenware, parrula fictilibus solitum dare vela phaselis et breribus pictae remis incumbere testae, and so Strabo xvii. ὀστράκων πορθμεῖα. sua is emphatic, for circumvehī rura is regular for ‘riding round a farm’ (cf. Hor. Sat. I. 6. 58 circum me Satureiano vectari rura caballo), but the Egyptians ride round theirs in a peculiar manner.

290. quaque ...] Probably, although the Persians were famous archers, ‘quiver-clad Persia’ refers really to the Parthian bowmen (cf. 314) for ‘Persian’ and ‘Parthian’ are almost equivalent in the Roman poets. Of course Persia does not border on Egypt, and the line may be an instance of ‘Virgil’s vague notion of geography’ (Conington), but on the other hand the boundaries of the great Oriental empire, which was known successively as Assyrian, Babylonian, Median, Persian, and Parthian, did continually ‘press on’ (urquet) those of Egypt (see the Old Testament, and especially Is. xix. 23), so that Persia and Egypt are naturally contrasted as two rival and neighbouring empires.

291. septem ora] Cf. Aen. 6. 800 septem gemini ... ostia Nili, and Ovid calls it septemfluus and septemplex. Only two ‘mouths’ now remain—the Rosetta and the Damietta branches.

292. coloratis ab Indis] i.e. the Ethiopians.

293. viridem nigra] Artistic contrast. nigra harena: the black ‘loam’ or alluvial deposit brought down by the Nile, whence the native name for Egypt, Chēmi (black); cf. Her. 2. 12 Αγυ̃ςσον ... μελάγγαιον καὶ κατερρηγυμένην, ‘with black and crumbling loam’.

294. iacit salutem] ‘rests’ or ‘builds its (hope of) safety’, the phrase being formed on the analogy of the common phrase iacere fundamentum, e.g. Livy 1. 12 prima urbi fundamenta ieci.

295-314. After building a confined cell, admitting but little air or light, a young bullock is killed, by being beaten until the carcase is almost a jelly, and shut up in it along with aromatic herbs. This is done in spring and as the bruised mass begins to ferment bees begin to develop.

The points which Virgil emphasizes are (1) that the spot selected is to be small and confined so as ‘to suit its special purpose’ (ipsos ad usus), (2) the building is also to be only just large enough to hold the carcase (cf. angusti, premunt, artis), and (3) there is to be ventilation and light, but only to a scanty degree. The object is clearly to produce a close atmosphere and so induce putrefaction.

296. angusti imbrice tecti] ‘with the arch of a narrow roof’: imbrices are semi-cylindrical convex tiles placed over the junction of the flat tiles on a roof, see illustration in Smith’s large Dict. of Ant. and Marquardt Privatleben², p. 638.

297. parietibus] For scansion cf. 38 n. premunt: ‘shut in’. Of course they do not shut in the actual spot where the building is erected, but they shut in a part of it, and so are said ‘to shut it (hunc) in’.

298. quattuor a ventis] i.e. to the four points of the compass; a simply marks direction, cf. a fronde, ab occasu, a Sequanis, etc. obliqua luce, i.e. perhaps through loop-holes widening inwards, but the expression is merely the opposite of plena luce or adversa luce, and suggests not a full and direct but a scanty and side light.

301. obstruitur] ‘gagged’, the object seems to be to keep in the blood, cf. per integram pellem in the next line. plagisque: ‘and then being beaten to death its carcase (viscera) is pounded into pulp through the unbroken skin’, i.e. taking care not to break the skin.

303. in clauso] Cf. 157 n.

304. recentes] ‘fresh-plucked’.

305. Zephyris] i.e. at the first sign of spring, cf. G. 1. 44.

306. rubeant] ‘blush’, ‘are bright’; cf. G. 2. 319 vere rubenti. The subj. here after antequam, where the indicative might be expected, is due to the fact that hoc geritur is virtually a command (‘this must be done’) after which a subj. would follow regularly. See Kennedy.

307. tignis] ‘the rafters’.

308. teneris] ‘softening’.

309. aestuat] ‘ferments’. et visenda....: ‘and living creatures noteworthy in wondrous wise’. Virgil clearly supposes that bees are produced by spontaneous generation, just as worms seem to develop spontaneously in decaying animal matter. Of course in such cases the living creatures are produced from eggs, the incubation of which is assisted by the warmth of putrefaction.

311. miscentur ...] 'swarm, and ever more and more try the thin air'. carpo is very common in the poets with such words as viam, iter, etc., in the sense of 'seize on', = 'take a journey' or 'road', and some render here 'soar through' (cf. G. 3. 142 carpere prata fuga), but it seems rather to describe the first ineffectual efforts of the insects, whose wings are yet but half-developed, to fly. They keep trying to get hold of the air. magis magis: cf. Cat. 64. 274 magis magis increbrescent; Eur. Iph. T. 1406 μᾶλλον μᾶλλον.

312. ut effusus ...] So Aen. S. 317 effusi nimbo similes, of runners starting in a race. Tennyson has a similar but finer image—"Like summer tempest came her tears".

313. erupere] The instantaneous perfect (cf. 330 n.), the sudden outburst of the fully developed swarm being contrasted with the previous gradual development. pulsante: probably intr. (cf. G. 3. 106 pavor pulsans) = 'twanging'. Others say 'supply eam', but pulsare sagittam is doubtful Latin.

314. prima ...] 'whenever the light Parthians first begin the combat'. Ancient combats often commenced with a discharge of arrows before the armies came to close quarters, but the Parthians were also especially famous for their use of the bow in fighting, their mounted archers harassing the foe from a distance, and continually retiring when attacked, pouring in showers of arrows as they did so (cf. G. 3. 31 fidentemque fuga Parthum versisque sagittis). leves: suggests a contrast between their light cavalry and the heavy-armed Roman infantry.

315-558. According to Servius the whole of this portion of the book was originally an encomium on the poet C. Cornelius Gallus, for which the present story was substituted after his disgrace and death. He was a writer of elegiacks and a friend of Virgil (see Ecl. x.), but, though he fought on the side of Octavian at Actium, and was made by him prefect of Egypt, he there incurred the displeasure of the Emperor, and committed suicide B.C. 26.
315-332. Who first discovered this device? It was the shepherd Aristaeus, who, when his bees perished, bitterly taunted his mother with allowing him, though the son of a god, to thus lose even the glory of his mortal life.

315] extudit] ‘forged’, ‘fashioned’. The word is elsewhere (cf. 328 and G. 1. 133 ut varias usus meditando extunderet artes) of slow laborious fashioning by human effort, but here seems merely to suggest that the plan was not an easy one to discover.

316. unde ...] ‘whence did this new experience of men take its rise’? The line repeats the preceding line in a new form—What god discovered, and whence did men derive the plan? hominum experientia is clearly not men’s efforts to discover the plan, for a god discovered it, but their ‘acquaintance with it’. Hence the note of Servius nullo docente ars per usum reperta is clearly wrong, and how could such a plan be discovered per usum?

317. Aristaeus] Aristaeus was a hero, son of Apollo and Cyrene, afterwards deified for his benefits to mankind in introducing improved methods of agriculture. He is addressed as cultor nemorum, G. 1. 14, and was also worshipped under the titles of Ἀγρεύς, ‘god of fields’ and Νόμιος, ‘god of grazing’. Tempe: neut. pl. like τεῖχη. Aristaeus seems to have been a very migratory deity, for 283 he is ‘Arcadian’, here bee-keeping in Thessaly, G. 1. 14, keeping herds in Ceos, while it is in Egypt that he introduces this new discovery.

319. caput] ‘source’, cf. 368; Hor. Od. 1. 1. 22 ad aquae lene caput sacrae. extremi: he has fled up the Peneus all the way from Tempe, and only halts when he reaches ‘the hallowed source at the river’s end’. sacrum: all rivers and fountains were held sacred, as specially beloved by nymphs, river-deities, and the like; so here the Peneus is the haunt of the river-god Peneus, whose daughter, the nymph Cyrene, dwells in the ‘depths’ of its fountain.

323. si modo ...] ‘if only he whom thou tellest of is my father, even Thymbraean Apollo’. The line is imitated from Od. 9. 529 where the Cyclops appealing to Poseidon for aid says κλοθεὶ ... εἰ ἐσθεν γε σός εἰμι, παῦρο δ’ εἶμος εὐχεα εἶναι, and the suggestion in both cases is that their cruel destiny belies their supposed divine origin. Thymbra, a district in the Troad, had a famous temple of Apollo, cf. Aen. 3. 85.
324. aut quo ...] ‘or whither has this love for me been banished’? cf. Aen. 2. 595 aut quonam nostri tibi cura recessit? The force of ‘or’ is—‘Why did you bear me? or (since you did so) why have you ceased to love me?’

325. caelum sperare] ‘hope for heaven’. As half-divine he (like Hercules, Aeneas, and Romulus) had hoped to win divine honours by deserving them.

326. ipsum] Emphasize the contrast with caelum. He had hoped for immortality, but now ‘even this poor glory of his mortal life’ was lost.

327. vix] i.e. with difficulty. It was only after ‘all manner of trials’ that his study of husbandry had laboriously ‘wrought-out’ for him that skill in bee-keeping which was the crown and glory of his life.

328. te mater] A terse and bitter taunt—‘even this, though thou art my mother, I lose’. Cf. Hor. Sat. 2. 5. 6 where Ulysses says to Teiresias vides ut nudus inopsque domum redeam, te vate, ‘this is what your prophetic guidance does for me’.

329. quin age ...] ‘nay, come and with thy own hands uproot my fruitful orchards’; felices is the opposite of steriles, cf. G. 2. 81.

331. sata] Not ‘crops’, as messes have just been mentioned, but ‘young plants’, cf. G. 2. 350 where sata = virgulta. molire: ‘wield’; the word is a favourite one with Virgil of ‘doing’, ‘making’, or ‘using’ anything that needs effort. He has moliri fulmina, tecta, fugam, arcem, insidias, etc.

333–347. His mother heard the cry as she sat spinning in her cavern among the nymphs, while Clymene sang the loves of the gods.

This passage is copied from II. 18. 35 seq. where Thetis hears the groans of Achilles as she sits in the depths of the sea surrounded by Nereids. It was common in the heroic age for ladies to sit spinning with their attendants.

333. sonitum sensit] ‘caught the sound’, but without hearing the words, cf. line 353. thalamo ...: ‘beneath her chamber in the depths of the river'; the chamber is described as a grotto in 373. For the position of sub cf. Ecl. 8. 60 specula de montis; Aen. 6. 58 corpus in Aeacidae.

335. carpebant] Cf. line 390 n. hyali ...: 'dyed with a rich sea-green hue'. strcasecmp(see L. and S.) is probably 'glass' and the sea-nymphs wear garments of the colour of glass or of the sea, cf. vitreis sedilibus 350, where vitreus =  bgcolor.

336. Drymoque ...] The names are all Greek, but some of them describe wood-nymphs; both classes of nymphs being regarded as 'sisters' (cf. 382). Drymo is from  bgcolor, 'an oak-coppice'; Xantico from  bgcolor, 'golden-haired'; Ligea from  bgcolor, 'clear-voiced'; Phyllodoce apparently = 'leaf-receiving', cf. Cymodoce, 'wave-receiving'; Nesaee from  bgcolor; Spio from  bgcolor =  bgcolor, 'a cavern'; Thalia from  bgcolor = 'blooming'; Cydippe from  bgcolor and  bgcolor, 'exulting in horses'; Lycorias (?) from  bgcolor; Clio from  bgcolor, 'to celebrate in song'; Deiopea, (?) 'she of the martial voice', cf. Calliope.

337. caesariem ...] 'with glossy ringlets streaming over their snowy necks'. caesariem is probably direct acc. after effusae used in a middle sense 'having their locks floating', cf. 357 percussa mentem 'having her soul smitten'; 371 auratus cornua 'having his horns gilded'; 482 caeruleos inplexae crinibus angues 'having snakes entwined in their hair'. Others call these accusatives of respect, cf. 181.

338. Nesaee] The line is inserted from Aen. 5. 826 and copied from II. 18. 39  bgcolor |  bgcolor, but is probably spurious, as the remainder of Virgil's list differs from Homer's.

340. Lucinae ...] 'having experienced the travail of childbirth'.

342. ambae] 'both with gold, both girdled with dappled skins'. They are marked as huntresses, cf. Aen. 1. 323 succintam pharetra et maculose tegmine lyncis. auro probably only goes loosely with incinctae, Virgil meaning little more than that they wore golden ornaments, not necessarily a golden girdle.
343. atque Ephyre | atque] For the hiatus, cf. 463 atque Getae, atque. Ephyre was the ancient name of Corinth and several other towns. Asia from the 'Asian meadow' on the banks of the Cayster in Lydia (cf. G. 1. 383 Asia prata Caystri). The continent of Asia has the first syllable short.

344. tandem positis ...] i.e. having just come from a long hunt. For Arethusa see Vocab.

345. inter quas ...] Clymene sings love-stories to the nymphs as they spin, just as in Homer the bard chants 'the deeds of heroes' at the feasts of men. The love of Mars for Venus and the devices of her husband, the limping Vulcan, were a favourite subject in ancient poetry and art, and in Homer, among the luxurious Phaeacians, the bard sings even to the men ἄμφ' Ἄρεος φιλότητος εὐστεφάνου τ' Ἀφροδίτης Od. 8. 267 seq. curam inanem: i.e. his vain precautions.

346. dulcia f urta] 'amorous deceits'; furtum is regular in this special sense of deceiving a husband, e.g. Ov. Her. 17. 141; Tib. 1. 2. 34.

347-386. A second time Cyrene hears the cry, and when Arethusa reports that it is her son's, bids the waters part to form a passage for him. He enters and views with wonder the sources of all earth's mighty rivers; then when he reaches his mother's grotto the nymphs welcome him with a feast, and she, after due prayer and libation to Oceanus, addresses him.

347. numerabat] 'was recounting'.

348. captae] 'charmed'. pensa devolvunt: much the same as carpentes pensa G. 1. 390, and elsewhere stamen, filum deducere. The distaff (colus) was held upright in the left hand and from the ball of wool at the top a thread was drawn out underneath by the right hand and then twisted (hence devolve) by giving the spindle (fusus) a whirl, see illustration in Smith's Class. Dict. s.v. fusus.

350. luctus] 'lament'. vitreis: 'glassy' i.e. (1) green, and (2) transparent, cf. 335 n.

352. flavum, 'golden-haired'.

353. et procul] 'and from afar (she cries)'; so too the verb is omitted Aen. 2. 42 et procul: 'o miserī ...', and below line 357.
354. ipse] The pronoun implies that Aristaeus had been uppermost in Cyrene's thoughts—'Yes (tibi, ethic dat. = 'let me tell you,') 'tis he himself, thy chiefest care, ...'tis sad Aristaeus who stands ...'. cura: 'object of care', cf. Ecl. 10. 22 tua cura Lycoris.

355. genitoris] 'sire', probably only a title of respect, cf. 369 pater Tiberinus; Aen. 8. 72 Thybri genitor (Macanlay's 'Father Tiber'); 1. 155, 5. 817, genitor of Neptune, and 5. 14 pater Neptune; but see 382 n.

357. percussa ...] 'her mind smitten with a strange terror'; for construction of mentem cf. 337 n.

360. qua] = ut ea (via), 'that thereby the youth might advance'.

361. curvata ...] From Od. 11. 243 πορφύρεων δ' ἄρα κύμα περιστάθη, οὐρεὶ ἱσον | κυρτωθέν, κρύψεν τε θεών. The water swells up until it is 'arched like a mountain' and so forms 'a vast recess' which receives him and 'conducts him beneath the stream.'

364. sonantes] 'echoing' with the noise of many waters.

367. diversa locis] 'apart in place'. The rivers are represented as separate and distinct in the subterranean region from which they flow just as they are on earth. The Phasis and Lycus are in Colchis, the Enipeus in Thessaly.

368. se erumpit: 'bursts his way forth'; for the active use of erumpo, G. 1. 445 sese rumpent radii.

369. saxosus sonans] 'rocky roaring'. Virgil is fond of thus combining an adjective with the present participle (usually in nom.) where an adverb is strictly required. Cf. 19 tenuis fugiens, 425 rapidus torrens, 'fiercely scorching'; G. 1. 163 tarda ... volventia planastra, 'slow-rolling wains'; Aen. 3. 7 levis crepitans, 'gently rustling'.

371. et gemina ...] 'and bull-visaged Eridanus with his twain horns gilded'. The Greeks spoke of rivers as resembling bulls, probably on account of their violence and their roar; cf. II. 21. 237 μερυκώς ἦτε ταύρος of the Xanthus; Eur. Ion 1286 ὁ ταυρόμορφον ὄμμα Κηφισοῦ πατρός: Aen. 8. 77 corniger of the Tiber; Hor. Od. 4. 14. 25 tauriformis Aujidus. The horns of bulls were often gilded for sacrifice.

373. mare purpureum] Homer's ἀλα πορφυρέην (II. 16. 391) which some explain 'troubled', others 'darkly-gleaming' (see L. and S. s.v. πορφύρεος). Catullus 64. 275 says of the waves, when the sea is stirred by wind in bright sunshine, purpurea ... nantes a luce refulgent, and purpureus here seems clearly to describe (1) the deep colour of the sea, and (2) the shimmer or radiance of the moving waves, cf. 54. violentior: for the fury of the river, cf. G. 1. 482 proruit insano contorquens vertice siivas | fluviorum rex Eridanus.

374. in thalami ...] 'beneath her chamber's roof o'er-arched with fretted stone'. In Cic. Tusc. Disp. 1. 37 a trochaic line is quoted from some old poet per speluncas saxis structas asperis pendentibus; so Lucr. 6. 195 compares clouds piled up into an arching mass to speluncas ... saxis pendentibus structas; cf. Aen. 1. 167 scopulis pendentibus antrum; Ov. Her. 15. 141 antra ... pendentia tofo. These passages show that pendere is specially used of the appearance of the gradually over-arching walls of a natural cave or grotto, which seem to any one looking up to 'hang' unsupported. In Mart. 2. 14. 9 centum pendentia tecta columnis is a description of the Hecatostylon at Rome, and the addition of columnis makes the passage quite different from this, so that to render here 'supported on (columns of) pumice' seems forced.

375. cognovit] i.e. learnt the cause or history of. inanes: partly because all tears are 'idle' (cf. Tennyson, Princess iv. "Tears, idle tears, I know not what they mean"), partly because she had been really alarmed at her son's trouble, whereas now she knows that she can relieve it.

376. manibus] Cf. Od. 1. 136 χέρνιβα δ' ἀμφίπολος προχόῳ ἐπέχευε φέρουσα. ordine: 'in order due', i.e. according to the proper order of a feast, which prescribes this initial washing of the hands, cf. 537. The whole procedure is Homeric, as is also the practice of offering food to a guest before discussing his business.

377. tonsis ...] 'napkins with close-shorn nap', i.e. delicate, not rough or coarse.
NOTES.

378. et plena reponunt pocula] This might = 'replace the goblets full' i.e. as soon as they are emptied (cf. repostae G. 3. 527), but, as Virgil is describing the feast in its successive acts, it is better to explain 'and then (i.e. after the eating is done) in turn serve the brimming goblets'. After dinner came what we call dessert, and it was then that the wine was formally introduced and drinking, preceded by solemn libations, began.

379. Panchaeis ignibus] 'the flames of Panchaean frankincense'; cf. Ov. Met. 15. 754 placat odoratis herbosas ignibus aras 'with perfumed flames' = with the flames of incense.

adolescunt: there is no parallel for this use of adolesco which perhaps means 'blaze' with a collateral suggestion of 'growing', 'rising higher'. The active adoleo is fairly common = 'make blaze' or 'burn in sacrifice' (e.g. Ecl. 8. 66 verbenasque adole; Aen. 7. 71 adolet dum altaria taedis), and it is suggested that it originally meant 'increase' (root ol found in adolescents, proles, suboles, etc.), and then 'honour with sacrifice', 'sacrifice'. The use of adolescunt here seems to confirm this.

380. Maeonii] i.e. Lydian; probably the wine of Mount Tmolus, cf. G. 2. 98.

382. patrem rerum] Cf. Il. 14. 246 ὤκεανός ὅσπερ γένεσις πάντεσσι τέτικτα, and 201 ὤκεανόν τε, θεόν γένεσιν, καὶ μὴτέρα Τῆθιν. In Homer Oceanus merely takes an early place in the genealogy of the gods, but Virgil combines with this a reference to the philosophical theory of Thales, that water was the source of all things. Cf. too the common application of pater to sea and river gods 355 n.

384. ter ...] The wine is poured on 'the blazing hearth' to cause a momentary blaze, which was considered auspicious, cf. Ecl. 8. 106; Ov. Her. 13. 113 ut solet effuso surgere flamma mero.

385. subiecta] 'shooting up', cf. Ecl. 10. 74. reluxit: 'shone out'; re suggests a contrast between the sudden flash and the previous obscurity.

386. animum] Clearly not 'her' mind but 'his'; in addition to encouraging him with this omen from heaven, she also addresses himself 'herself' (ipsa).
'You must capture Proteus, who feeds the herds of Neptune, and is a seer, but when captured keep him tightly bound in spite of all his devices to escape and compel him to reply. I will lead you to a spot on the shore where he takes his midday rest, and when you have caught him he will turn into all manner of shapes to elude you, but the more he does so the more closely you must hold him'.

The whole passage about Proteus is copied from Od. 4. 382 seq., where Menelaus takes him prisoner by the advice of Eidothea.

388. magnum ...] ‘who traverses the mighty deep with fishes and a yoked team of two-footed steeds’. The steeds of Proteus are at once ‘fishes and two-footed horses’, the ἵπποι μαμένδαι, creatures in shape like a ‘sea-horse’, which sea-gods used. For currus of the horses and not the chariot cf. G. 3. 91 Martis equi biinges et magnum currus Achilli.

392. novit namque ...] ‘for as a seer he knoweth all things, (he knoweth) what is, and what hath been, and what draweth forward being yet for to come’; cf. II. 1. 70 ὅς ἥδη τά τ’ ἔοντα, τά τ’ ἔσομενα, πρὸ τ’ ἔοντα. Some, against clear ms. authority, would read sunt ... fuerunt ... trahuntur on the ground that in novit omnia quae sunt, the last three words are a simple substantival sentence = τά ἔοντα, but they may equally well be oblique question dependent on novit repeated.

393. trahuntur] expresses the sequence or connection of events, and suggests the threads of destiny.

394. quippe ...] ‘for surely such is the will of Neptune’. Both quippe and visum est are stately.

398. nam sine vi] Nam explains the emphatic vinculis of 396, the assonance in vinculis and vi assisting this and the repetition (as usual in inverted order) of vim and vincula in 399 making it still clearer, ‘with fetters must he be secured ... for without force he will give no oracles ...; force unyielding and fetters when he is secured do thou employ; thereon alone his wiles will dash themselves to pieces idly’.

398. illum] Emphatic; though other gods are moved by prayer he is not.

400. tende] With vim = intende, with vincula rather = contendere, cf. 412. demum, strictly with haec; it is against these obstacles and these alone, against these and nothing short of them that his strength will be in vain. Demum is commonly thus used (1) with pronouns, as is demum, ille demum ‘he only’, or (2) adverbs, as sic demum, tum demum ‘then and not before’. inanes: with frangentur; proleptic, cf. 104.

401. cum ... accenderit ...; 402. cum sitiunt] ‘as soon as the sun shall have kindled ... (the hour) when the grass is thirsty ...’.

406. eludent] ‘shall (seek to) baffle thee’.

408. fulva cervice leaena] ‘a lioness with tawny neck’; Homer has ἄλλῃ ἡτοι πρῶτιστα λέων γένετ' ἤνγένειος, and probably Virgil means ‘a lion with tawny mane’, leaena being used without reference to its gender (just as tigris is merely ‘tiger’); Valerius Flaccus, 3. 740, gives lea ‘a mane’ (iuba).

409. acrem] ‘sharp’.

410. aut in aquas ...] ‘and melting into unsubstantial water will be gone’; tenues suggests an antithesis with that which is ‘solid’, ‘substantial’, and so capable of being grasped, cf. Ovid A. A. 1. 761 utque leves Proteus modo se tennabit in undas.

413. donec ...] ‘until he shall be such (in form) after all his shifting shapes as thou didst see him what time he covered his eyes ...’ Cf. Hom. Od. 4. 421 τοίος ἐὼν, οἵου κε κατευνηθέντα ἔντοσθε.

415-436. Then she anoints her son with ambrosia to give him strength, and leads him to the cave of Proteus in a sheltered bay. There she hides him, and, when the fiery sun had reached the zenith, Proteus came and his seals laid themselves down to slumber, while he sat in their midst on a rock and counted them.
415. ambrosiae odorem] Ambrosia is (1) the food of ‘the immortals’, from ἀμβροσίας, and (2) a divine unguent. The word in this second sense (as here, and Aen. 1. 403 ambrosiae-que comae divinum vertice odorem | spiravere) being derived from the Oriental ambra, the name of the perfume ambergris. This unguent is not only sweetly-scented (417) but strength-giving (418, cf. Aen. 12. 418 salubres | ambrosiae sucos et odoriferam panaceam).

417. aura] ‘scent’; cf. Lucr. 2. 851 nullam quae mittit naribus auram; Mart. 3. 65. 2 de Corycio quae venit aura creco.

418. habilis] ‘supple’ (Kennedy).

419. exesi] ‘eaten out’, ‘hollowed’, i.e. by the action of the water. quo plurima ...: ‘whither full many a wave is driven by the wind and separates itself into the retiring bays’: the great wave is broken up into small bodies of water which creep up gently into each little curve.

424. procul] ‘hard by’, ‘close by’; cf. Ecl. 6. 16 serta procul tantum capiti delapsa iacebant where the garlands ‘just fallen from the head’ of the tipsy Silenus ‘lie close by him’. resistit: ‘withdraws into a veil of cloud’, the regular method adopted by deities in Homer for concealing themselves or their friends. Curiously enough Virgil uses the same verb to express the figure of Aeneas as he emerges from a similar cloud ‘standing out’ against the dark background, see Aen. 1. 588 restitit Aeneas claraque in luce refulsit.

425. rapidus torrens] ‘that fiercely scorches’; for rapidus of ‘consuming’ heat cf. Ecl. 2. 10 rapido fessis messoribus aestu.
426. medium ...] 'the fiery sun had devoured half his course'. The bold and original phrase haurire orbem (copied by Stat. Theb. 1. 369 vastum haurit iter, and Col. 10. 313 hauserit et flammis Lernaei brachia Cancri) suggests strongly the consuming fury with which the sun advances; he seems to 'eat up' his path. Cf. Job xxxix. 24, 'He (the horse) swalloweth the ground with fierceness and rage'.

427. et cava] 'and as they ran hollow in their parched channels his rays heated the boiling rivers to the very mud'.

431. exsultans] 'in their gambols'. rorem amarum: 'the salt sea-spray'.

432. sternunt ...] Note the heavy spondees describing how the cumbrous beasts settle down.

435. auditisque ...] 'and with the sound of their bleating the lambs whet (the appetite of) the wolves'.

436. numerumque recenset] Cf. Milton L'Allegro, 67, 'And every shepherd tells his tale'.

437-452. Aristaeus rushes up and seizes him, whereupon he changes into marvellous shapes, but finding all trickery vain resumes the aspect of a man, and, after angrily asking the reason of such violence, to which Aristaeus replies that he knows it himself, he at length relates the decree of fate.

437. cuius] 'and when now the chance of seizing him was offered'; quoniam = quam iam, the temporal sense being common in early Latin, cf. Plautus, Aul. 9. is quoniam moritur, 'on his death'.

439. cum ...] ἡμεῖς δὲ ἱάχωντες ἐπέσυμεθ', ἀμφὶ δὲ χεῖρας | βάλλομεν· οὐδὲ γέρων δόλης ἐπελήθησο τέχνης (Od. 4. 454).

440. occupat] The rhythm and pause, as in Homer's βάλ- λομεν mark rapidity. non inmemor: litotes.

441. in sese] i.e. to his original shape so that he speaks with 'the lips of a man'.

445. nam quis] 'Why, who?'; a very dramatic and excited form of question, much stronger than quisnam. Con- ington compares Ter. Phorm. 5. 1. 5 nam quæ haec anus est exanimata, a fratre quæ egressa est meo? confidentissime: note the weight and size of the word. While fidens has a good sense, confidens in classical Latin has a bad one = ‘impudent’, cf. Cic. Tusc. 4. 7. 14 qui fortis est, idem est fidens; quoniam confidens, mala consuetudine loquendi, in vitio ponitur.

447. ipse] i.e. without my telling thee. neque est ... : ‘nor is it possible to deceive thee in aught, but do thou (on thy part) cease to wish (to deceive me)’. Proteus is νηφρής (Od. 4. 384), but as he cannot be deceived so he should cease attempting to deceive Aristaeus. The emphatic tu makes the antithesis clear: to deceive thee is impossible)(do not thou seek to deceive me. Other explanations are: (1) ‘Thou canst not deceive me by pretending ignorance, so cease to attempt it’ (Conington), but this sacrifices the antithesis, and sed cannot = ‘so’; (2) ‘nor can aught escape thee, but cease to deceive’, the clear objection to which is that fallere is used in two senses.

448. secuti] ‘obeying’.

450. ad haec] ‘thereo’, i.e. in reply. vi ... : ‘at last under strong compulsion rolled upon him ...’. The rage which the god exhibits is due to his being forced to answer. Others explain it as a sign of prophetic fury, prophets when inspired exhibiting signs of frenzy, which were supposed to indicate divine possession, cf. the case of the Sibyl, Aen. 6. 47-51, 77-80; but a god surely does not become thus possessed and frenzied.

451. glauco] ‘light-blue’ or ‘gray’, the colour of Athene’s eyes, who is γλαυκώπεις: it marks a fierce gleam.

452. sic ...] ‘thus opens his lips with (the utterance of) destiny’.

453-469. Divine vengeance pursues thee for the wrong done to Orpheus, whose hapless bride, seeking to avoid thy pursuit, marked not a dreadful serpent in her path. For her the Dryads wailed and the mountains wept, while her husband solaced his sorrow with song from dawn till even, and dared to enter the gates of the grave to recover her.
NOTES.

453. non te nullius] Emphatic litotes: ‘assuredly some wrath divine dogs thee’. Conington compares Eur. Iph. A. 809 οὐκ ἄνευ θεῶν; Aesch. Ag. 649 οὐκ ἄμήνιτον θεῶς. nullius exercent: Virgil not infrequently lengthens a short vowel in arsis (i.e. when the accent of the verse falls on it) cf. 92 melior insignis; 137 tondebat hyacinthi.

455. haudquaquam ob meritum] As the text stands these words must qualify miserabilis ‘wretched by no means on account of his deserts’; but the reading of the Palatine ms. ad meritum gives better sense, ‘this penalty does hapless Orpheus stir up for thee—did not destiny oppose—by no means after (i.e. reaching the standard of) thy deserving (i.e. far inferior to it)’. Those who explain ‘stirs up for thee a penalty which thou hast nowise deserved’ have to entirely neglect magna luis commissa and the facts of the case. ni fata resistant, suscitat: the sentence is irregular, there being a suppressed thought—‘Orpheus seeks to punish you (and he would succeed) did not destiny oppose’.

457. illa quidem ...] ‘she indeed, flying beside the river with headlong speed so but she might escape thee, saw not a monstrous serpent that before her feet, poor maiden doomed to die, guarded ...’. Note the pathos produced by throwing forward the pronoun illa and then placing moritura puella later in apposition to it; cf. Hom. Il. 1. 488 αὐτῷ ὁ μὴνε νησὶ παρῆμενος ὡκυτρόποισιν ... Ἀχιλλεύς, and see Wagner.

dum te fugeret ... praeceps: dum with the subj. expresses the aim and object of her headlong flight; ‘until she escaped’ Aristaeus, or ‘provided she escaped him’, she would run anywhere at any risk. Cf. Aen. 1. 5 mulia ... passus (est) dum conderet urbem; 10. 800 sequuntur | dum genitor ... abiret; Hor. Sat. 1. 1. 40 nil obstet tibi, dum ne sit te ditior alter. The peculiarity in this case is that the dum-clause does not follow a verb, but the adjective praeceps, which is however = ‘while she was flying’.

460. chorus aequalis D.] ‘the band of her comrade Dryads’.

461. inplerunt ... fierunt] The question of rhyme in ancient poets has been much discussed and many rhymes are no doubt accidental, but their great love of assonance makes it clear that they liked the effect produced by repeated sounds, and the rhyme here is clearly intended to suggest mournful repetition of the wail. So too 466 te veniente die, te decedente canebat expresses melancholy iteration of the same theme, while 509 plevisse et gelidis haec evolvisse sub anris, | mult-centem tigres, et agentem carmine quercus the double rhyme is too marked to be accidental. Then compare Hor. Ep. 1. 14. 7 fratrem maerentis rapto de fratre dolentis, and Ep. 2. 2. 79 tu me inter strepitus nocturnos atque diurnos, and consider whether two poets with such wonderful ear for sound as Horace and Virgil would introduce these lines into their most finished poems without design.

Rhodopeiae arces: Virgil sometimes shortens a long vowel or diphthong (when not in arsis) before a word beginning with a vowel, the practice being borrowed from Homer, e.g. Od. 1. 27 'Ολυμπίου ἄργαρ ἤσαν: cf. Aen. 3. 211 insulâe Ionio; 5. 261 Ilïo alto.

462. Rhesi ...: i.e. Thrace, of which Rhesus was king, cf. Hor. Od. 2. 16. 5 bello furiosa Thrace.

463. Actias Orithyia. Orithyia was a daughter of Erectheus, king of Attica (hence called Actias from 'Akte or 'Akteia, an old name of Attica = 'the peninsula'), who was carried off by Boreas to Thrace.

465. Note the pathos of te four times repeated, the assonance of solo secum, and the weary iteration of veniente and decedente.

467. Taenarias fauces] Somewhere in the rocky promontory of Taenarum at the S. of Laconia was a cave fabled to lead into the lower world.

468. et caligantem ...] 'a grove murky with black terror'. Groves were always regarded by early peoples with awe as the abodes of spirits; hence Virgil makes frequent mention of them in connection with hell and its approaches; cf. Aen. 6. 131, 154, etc. Note the weight of the line.

470. nesciaque ...] The ἀμηθυσ of II. 9. 154; cf. Hor. Od. 2. 14. 6 inlacrimabilem Plutona; for the inf., cf. 134 n.

471-503. As he sang there thronged around him the countless ghosts and phantoms of the dead, while hell itself was amazed. But on his return, just as he reached the upper air, forgetful of Proserpina’s command, he looked back upon his wife. Then all was undone; hell shook, and with a last cry of reproach and regret she vanished from his sight, never to be seen or sought again.
The whole of this Orpheus passage is imitated in Pope's Ode for St. Cecilia's Day (§ iv. to end), which should be carefully compared.

472. tenues] In Aen. 6. 292 the ghosts are tenues sine corpore vitas, the adj. expressing that which is 'fine', 'thin', 'unsubstantial'; cf. line 500. This passage is repeated with some alteration in Aen. 6. 305 seq.

473. quam multa ...] 'many as the thousands of birds that shelter themselves in the woods when ...'.

475. corpora ... heroum] Not a mere periphrasis = heroes, but calling attention to their heroic build; cf. G. 3. 51, 169; Aen. 2. 18 delecta vivum corpora.

476. magnanimum] The only adjective in which Virgil uses this contracted gen., which is common (1) with proper names, e.g. Danaum, and (2) with names describing a class of persons, e.g. divom, caelicolvm.

478. quos] probably governed by adligat, circum being adverbial; 'whom all around the black mud ... confines'.

481. quin ipsae ...] 'nay even the very halls (i.e. and not merely their inhabitants) were amazed'. intima: 'inmost'. Tartarum is the very lowest pit (cf. Aen. 6. 577) and in the utmost depths of hell.

482. caeruleos ...] 'that have dark blue snakes entwined in their locks'. For the construction (= δφαι ἐμπεπλεγμέναι) cf. 337 n.

483. tenuit inhians] 'held agape'.

484. vento constitit] exactly like cum placidum ventis staret mare Ecl. 2. 26 where the sea is said to be calmed by the winds, i.e. by their stopping. Orpheus lulled the wind to rest (cf. Hor. Od. 1. 11. 10), and as it stops it causes the wheel to stop.
485. iamque ...] Virgil assumes a knowledge of the story in his readers, and only mentions the 'giving back' (reuddita) of Eurydice to her husband, and the conditions (legem) on which she was given back parenthetically. casus evaserat: evado, 'to pass out', becomes transitive in the secondary sense of 'to escape from'; cf. Aen. 5. 438 tela exit.

487. hanc legem] 'this condition' (cf. foedera, 493), namely, that she should follow him and that he should not look back at her.

488. amantem] emphatic: it was 'love' that caused him to look back. Hence his error was 'pardonable indeed, did but the powers below know how to pardon'; cf. Pope, 'No crime was thine, if 'tis no crime to love'.

489. quidem] = μεν, and the antithesis ought strictly to be 'but the grave never pardons'.

490. suam] 'his own', as he fondly thought, and as, with an instant more of patience, she would have been. The same idea is brought out in the words which follow; it was when 'now just at the very entrance to light' that he looked back.

491. victus animi] 'yielding in his purpose'; his passion overcame his determination. animi is the locative case (like domi, humi); cf. G. 3. 289 nec sum animi dubius; Aen. 6. 332 sortemque animi miseratus iniquam. ibi omnis effusus labor: note the sense of sudden change produced (1) by the break and full stop after respexit quite at the end of the verse, and (2) by the brevity and abruptness of these four words.

492. inmitis tyranni] Pluto.

493. terque fragor ...] the 'crash' is that of subterranean thunder, the words being added to suggest awe and terror. Martyn quotes Milton, P.L. 9. 782, where at the Fall 'Earth felt the wound, and Nature from her seat, | Sighing through all her works, gave signs of woe | That all was lost', and 1000 'Earth trembled from her entrails as again | In pangs'; but in those passages Nature is made to sympathize and share in the suffering caused, whereas here there is no such intention, and the effect is purely dramatic. Avernis: an adj. = Avernian. In poetry proper names are often used as adjectives without any alteration in shape, e.g. Romula tellus, Medium flumen, Sulpiciis horreis. There was a fabled entrance to hell at Lake Avernus near Cumae (see Aen. 6.
107 seq.), but as in _Taenarias fauces_ 467 the strict local sense often disappears, and the adj. becomes merely = 'connected with Hades'.

495. _iterum..._ ] 'once more the cruel Fates call me back', i.e. the Fates call me back, and so compel me to tread once more the road to Hades.

496. _condit_ ] 'closes'. _natantia_: 'swimming'. Cf. Lucr. 3. 80 _nant oculi_ of intoxication; Aen. 5. 856 _natantia lumina solvit_ of sleep; and so here of death, cf. Ov. Met. 5. 71 _iam moriens oculis sub morte natantibus atra._

498. _invalidas_] partly = 'feeble', because the dead are so (Hom. Od. 10. 521 _vek'vov ἄμενηνά κάρηνα_), but chiefly 'that are powerless to reach thee.'

499. _ceu fumus..._ ] cf. II. 23. 100 _ψυχὴ δὲ κατὰ χθονὸς, ἵπτε καπνὸς_, | φ'χετο.

502. _praeterea_] 'thereafter', cf. Aen. 1. 49 _et quisquam numen Iunonis adorat_ | _praeterea_?

503. _passus_] sc. _est eum._

504–527. What could he do? whither turn? For seven long months he roamed the solitudes lamenting his loss with song ceaseless as the plaint of a nightingale bereaved of her young, with no thought for a new love. And as he wandered lone the Thracian women, angered by such devotion, amid their Bacchic revels rent him limb from limb; but as it floated down the Hebrus, his head still whispered with parting breath the name 'Eurydice', and 'Eurydice' the banks re-echoed.

504. _quid faceret_] the deliberative _quid faciam_ put in oblique speech.

506. _illa quidem..._ ] 'she indeed already rode shivering in the Stygian bark'. The line answers the preceding question: he could do nothing, for she was already gone past recall _Stygia cumba_: the bark in which Charon ferries souls across the Styx, cf. Aen. 6. 303, 413.

507. _septem illum totos_] Note the heavy slowness of movement. _ex ordine_: 'month after month'.

509. _haec evolvisse_] 'unfolded this tale (of woe)'.

511. qualis ...] The notes of the nightingale were supposed to be the lament of Philomela for her son Itys or Itylus, and Homer Od. 19. 518-523 compares Penelope's mourning to hers in a simile which Virgil copies here, though he alters it by introducing an actual nightingale that has lost its young, borrowing this idea from another simile of Homer (Od. 16. 216) in which Telemachus and his father wept ἀδινώτερον ἣ τ' οἰωνοὶ...ο_ios τ' τέκνα | ἀγρόται ἔξειλουτο πάρος πετερνά γενέσθαι.

514. flet noctem] 'weeps all night long'. The phrase seems to have been in Milton's mind when he wrote of the 'wakeful nightingale' that 'She all night long her amorous descant sung', P. L. 4. 603. ramoque: cf. δενδρέων ἐν πετάλοισι καθε-ξομένη πυκνοίσι, Hom. Od. 19. 520.

516. Venus] 'passion'.

517. Hyperboreas, Tanaïs, Rhipaeis] The words all describe the unknown and wintry wilds to the north of Thrace.

518. numquam viduata] 'never widowed from', 'never unwedded to'.

519. raptam ... inrita] The emphasis is on the adjectives and not on the nouns Eurydicen and dona: he laments 'the loss of Eurydice' and 'the vanity of Pluto's boon', cf. 512 amissos queritur fetus: 'laments the loss of her young'.

520. spretae] 'scorned (i.e. feeling themselves scorned) by such devotion the Thracian dames...'. munus is any 'gift' but especially any 'tribute' to the dead, cf. Aen. 4. 624 cinerique haec mititte nostro | munera, where the tribute Dido asks for from her people is undying hate of Rome, 6. 886.

521. inter sacra ...] The worship of Dionysius (or Bacchus) specially prevailed in Thrace, and during the 'orgies' (ὄργια, 'celebration of sacred rites') which took place at night, the female worshippers (Βάκχαι, Θυάδες, Μαινάδες) worked themselves up into a state of frenzy. It was in this condition that they chanced upon Orpheus and rent him limb from limb as a despiser of themselves and their deity. Apparently this 'rending' to pieces of the victim had a ritual significance, see the case of Pentheus Eur. Bacch. 1125 seq.

523. revulsum] 'rent', 'torn'.

524. Oeagrius] 'Oeagrius was father of Orpheus, so that Oeagrius here = 'paternus' (Conington).
525. vox ipsa. The ‘mere voice’, i.e. though the soul had fled. The voice is regarded as something corporeal which, like ‘the death-cold tongue’, still for a while continues to repeat the same sounds ‘with the last parting breath’.

527. toto flumine ‘o’er all the stream’.

528-547. Then Proteus flung himself into the deep, but Cyrene bade her son take heart. ‘The Nymphs,’ she said, ‘have sent this plague in anger for their comrade’s loss. Therefore sacrifice to the Nymphs four bulls and four heifers and leave the carcases in a leafy grove, but revisit it on the ninth day after, bringing funeral offerings to Orpheus and Eurydice.

528. se iactu dedit. ‘with a leap flung himself ... and where he flung himself made the water whirl in foam beneath the eddy’, i.e. apparently as he shot down below the eddy, which his plunge created, he made the water whirl and foam. The phrase emphasizes the vigour of his plunge. For torsit spumantem cf. Cat. 64. 13 tortaque remigio spumis incanduit unda; Sil. It. 7. 412 ac tortus multo spumabat remige pontus, where, however, tota and totus are also read. The old explanation of sub vertice was ‘beneath his head’.

530. at non Cyrene ‘but not so Cyrene (i.e. she did not desert Aristaeus), for (on the contrary) unasked she addressed the terrified youth’. Haec: ‘this’, i.e. which Proteus has told you.

537. ordine dicam ἐξηγῆσομαι, ordine, expressing virtual exactness of detail (Conington).

539. Lycaei A mountain in Arcadia, and so suiting the description of Aristaeus as Arcadius magister, line 283, but Virgil ignores the fact that he is now near Pallene.

540. intacta i.e. that has never borne the yoke.

542. demitte ‘let flow’.

543. corpora ipsa ipsa does not so much draw a contrast between the carcases and the blood as call emphatic attention to the carcases, which are to be left untouched, although this was most unusual, it being customary after offering certain portions to use the rest for food.
There was something sacred about the ninth day; a final sacrifice, novendiale sacrum, was offered to the dead on the ninth day after the funeral; the funeral games to Anchises are on 'the ninth day' (Aen. 5. 104), and the Roman week was of nine days, cf. nundinae.

In apposition to papaveras: the poppies are to be sent 'as an offering to the ghost of Orpheus'. The selection of the offering and the epithet Lethaea mark that it is to bring him forgetfulness of sorrow. mittes, mactabis, revises, venerabere: futures of command. Cf. the 'Thou shalt' of the Commandments.

The line contains a promise and a command; the command is to honour Eurydice with a funeral offering; the promise that this will 'appease' her wrath.

Aristaeus does as he is commanded, and on revisiting the grove finds the carcases alive with bees, which gradually develop and finally swarm in a tree.

An old form of strideo, ēre: so elsewhere Virgil has fervēre, fulgēre. Notice the order of development. The bees first 'buzz amid the putrifying carcase', then 'swarm forth', then 'trail in vast clouds', and 'finally (iamque) collect on a tree top, their clustering swarm (uvam) hanging from its bending boughs'.

A conclusion or Epilogue to the whole four books of the Georgics.

In Book I.; pecorumque, in Book II.; super arboribus, in Book III.

'dum ... fulminat bello' 'while Caesar thundered in war, 'beside deep Euphrates', like a second Alexander. dum, according to regular Latin idiom, takes present ind. even when referring to past time. The allusion is to the triumphal progress of Augustus (or, as he then was, Octavian) through the east after the battle of Actium, B.C. 31.

'dat iura] 'appoints laws', a stately phrase, marking absolute sway, cf. Hor. Od. 3. 3. 43 triumphatisque possit] Roma ferox dare iura Medis. Note, however, the difference between triumphatis and volentes. viamque affectat Olympo: 'and essays the path to heaven'; affectat like affectare regnum. Olympo, dat. for in Olympum, 'heavenwards', cf. Aen. 5. 451 it clamor caele.
564. ignobils oti] ‘inglorious ease’, as opposed to the glorious exploits of Augustus. The contracted gen. of nouns in -tum is regular in Horace and Virgil; the gen. in -ii in Ovid.

565. carmina qui lusi] ‘who sang in sportive verse the lays...’. ludere is commonly used of singing in light or sportive fashion, cf. Ecl. 1. 10 ludere quae vellem calamo permisit agresti; Hor. Od. 1. 32. 1 si quid vacui sub umbra] lusimus; 4. 9. 9 si quid olim lusit Anacreon. audaxque iuventa: ‘and with the boldness of youth’; the boldness consisted in being the first to attempt Bucolic poetry (carmina pastorum) in Latin after the model of Theocritus.

566. Tityre ...] With reference to the first line of the first Eclogue—Tityre, tu patulae recubans sub tegmine fagi.
